The Legendary Whale

Ali A. M. Yeddi

The Legendary Whale

Ali Abdelrahman Yeddi

Copyright © Ali Abdelrahman Yeddi: 2021

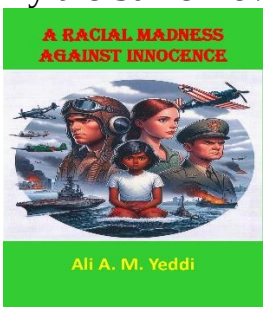
© Copyright No.: 112/2021, IPD, MOCI, Doha, Qatar

First edition: 2021
Second edition: 2023
Third edition: 2024

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any means, electronic, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior permission of the copyright holder.

Cover-design and illustrations were prepared by the author himself

By the Same Novelist:



Dedication

To whosoever taught me a letter

Contents

		P. No.
Author’s Word		vi
Characters in this Story		vii
Chapter 1	In Jim’s House	1
Chapter 2	In the Inn	7
Chapter 3	The Sailing	13
Chapter 4	The Thief	16
Chapter 5	Sikes’ Death	23
Chapter 6	With the Police	27
Chapter 7	The Revenge	36
Chapter 8	Death to Tylo Frip!	42
Chapter 9	The Storm	53
Chapter 10	The Hunt	59
Chapter 11	With Other Captains	73
Chapter 12	The Scary Voices	96
Chapter 13	The First Battle	109
Chapter 14	The Second Battle	120
Chapter 15	The Third Battle	132
Chapter 16	Sinking of the Ship	138
Chapter 17	Morgan’s Survival	149
Chapter 18	Returning to New York	157

Author's Word

Dear readers, I do not know what made me start my first writing initiative to write about a tale that reflects the ongoing conflict between man and nature. Was it my love for nature which made me mobilize it to defend itself or my critic for man's greed which engulfed and corrupted everything or both of them?

I do not know indeed, but the course of the events of the novel may tell the readers. The novel is within their hands and now it is the property of the readers. They are free to handle it the way they like and say about it whatever they like. After all our aim is to enrich the youth library with works that may please them.

My sole aim behind writing this novel is that I wanted to supplement the youth library with a type of literary material that they usually like and enjoy whether in the form of written material or otherwise. I have made it in the form of a written material. I hope that readers enjoy it.

I am deeply indebted to my sister; Fatima (11 years) for going through the text and offering productive comments and useful suggestions.

Ali Abdelrahman Mohammed Yeddi, 2021

Characters in this Story

Jim: A trader of fish and whale oil who wanted to kill an orca whale as it killed his son. He was a captain of a ship.
Rosa: Jim's wife.
Morgan: Jim's servant.
Boxtel: A man who was instigating Jim against the orca.
Sikes: Jim's son who went with his father in a hunting journey.
Systen: An officer in New York port.
Taigo, Sheigo, Taisam and Malgo: African whale hunters.
Shomo: A cannibal and whale hunters.
Sapt, Fagin, Darnay and Ropert: Officers of the ship.
Andy, Achley, Rachel, Emanda, Emaily and Lucie: The cookers of the ship.
George: The doctor of the ship.
Hawkins: A captain of a ship called Interquiek.
Oliver: A captain of a ship called Kaitfodam.
Bill: A captain of a ship called Todoshima.

//////////////////////////

Tylo Frip: An orca whale which killed Jim's son. It was a very smart and strong fellow.

Chapter 1
In Jim's House

A man lived in a house near New York beach. He was called Jim Fritz. He was a young and strong man. He was the best fish trader in the city. He was selling tuna, salmon, sardine and other types of fish. He was also interested in hunting whales to get oil. He was a rich man. The reason which made him the richest man in the city was that he was possessing strong and skillful men who hunt fish and whales for him. He lived happily with his family in a rich, expensive and comfortable house.

One day, he returned to his house. He was tired and exhausted. He took a nap and woke up at four o'clock p.m. He ate his lunch and sat on a chair saying to his wife; Rosa:

"I am very happy. I am becoming richer and richer. My trade is growing very well."

Rosa massaged his soft hair and said:

"Very well."

"Selling fish is giving us more money." Jim added, "Few years ago, people weren't interested in Rosa massaged his soft hair and said: "Very well."

whales' oil, but many people are buying it now. It's useful for lighting lamps. We have abundant of it. This means lots of money will come to us. But there is a problem. People are buying lots of fish. It is going out of stock very quickly. This forces us to go on a hunting journey every weekend, but we can also hunt more whales for getting their oil."

Rosa looked up to the roof and spoke quietly.

"I want to tell you something."

Suddenly, someone knocked the door.

"Come in." Jim shouted.

A young man entered the living room. He was wearing tidy and clean clothes. He was Morgan Tarner who helps Jim in his trade. He was an honest man. Therefore, Jim was trusting him.

"Good evening, sir," Morgan said, "I hope that you are well."

"Good evening, Morgan." Jim replied.

"Sir, we must go back to our work. We have to sell off the stored fish." Morgan added.

"I'll come there later on," Jim said, "You go and sell everything."

"Very well," Morgan said, "I want to tell you an important thing. The fish in the market is not very much available. We can go on a hunting journey on the coming days. Do you agree?"

"Today is Thursday. We will go on Sunday. We will prepare ourselves till that day," Jim said.

"Good, we can hunt more whales," Morgan said.

"Yes, we will prepare a big ship for that journey. Inform all the fishermen and whales hunters about the expected journey. We must store our necessary supplies in the ship till Sunday. We will start our journey at ten a.m. You can leave now."

Morgan thanked him and left.

"Yes, you had wanted to tell me something before Morgan came here. What was it?" Jim asked Rosa.

"Ah, I wanted to discuss something with you," She said, "You have three sons. Can you take Sikes; the eldest, with you in the next journey? Let him look at you while you are hunting whales and fish. This will teach him the art of your business."

Jim kept quiet for sometimes and said, "But I think that it's early for him to learn such things and the journey sometimes turns to be dangerous."

"Don't worry," Rosa said, "You always say that you want him to be a successful trader and whale hunter. You should train him right from now."

"I…but." Jim replied.

"He's fourteen years old now. He's old enough to ride the sea with you," Rosa said, "Don't worry and don't go far into your imagination, my dear. He can only watch what you are doing and learn from it for his future."

"Okay, please call him," Jim said.

Rosa went to Sikes' room and called him. Both of them entered the living room. Jim told Sikes about his desire to take him in the next journey. He told him about the date of the journey. Sikes thanked his father happily.

"One day, you will be a good hunter and trader just like me," Jim said with a smile.

Sikes went to his room. He was mad with happiness. He told his younger brothers about the journey. The two brothers got jealous, went to their father and requested him to take them with him. Jim refused to take them with him because they were still small. The two children went back to their room with disappointment.

"I can take Sikes with me, but I am afraid of something," Jim said to Rosa, "If a storm hits us while we are sailing on the ocean, it may destroy the ship and all of us may die. Then, you will regret forever."

"No, don't think in this way," Rosa said.

"Okay, I must leave now," Jim said.

He stood up and left the house. On the way, he met one of his friends. He was an officer who works with the customs of the port.

"Good evening, Mr. Systen," Jim said.

"Good evening," Systen said, "I knew that you are planning for a hunting journey. Morgan told me about it. I want also to accompany you. I am off from my duty for two months."

"Alright, you are welcome. We will start on Sunday," Jim said, "We will take the strongest African hunters on our ship as usual."

"Do you know a man called Taigo?" Systen asked.

"No." Jim replied. "Who is he?"

"He is the best African hunter." Systen replied, "He's an idolator, but he hunts very well. You can take him with you in your next journey."

"Certainly," Jim said, "Please, meet the ship's officers and inform them about the journey."

"Of course," Systen said.

Jim went to Morgan who was in the market selling fish and whale's oil. There was too much demand for whale's oil. Therefore, Jim told Morgan that they have to hunt more whales in the next journey. Morgan agreed and both of them continued their work till night.

Chapter 2
In the Inn

The clock struck eight. It was night, but the streets were still crowded. Every fisherman and whales' hunter knew about Jim's plan. Jim and Morgan closed down the market and walked together to a nearby inn. Jim saw some officers and fishermen sitting in the inn. He sat and talked to them. Morgan saw Taigo who was one of his African friends and who looks very strong. He was drinking a cup of tea. Morgan sat near him and said to him:

"Mr. Taigo, we are planning a hunting trip."

"Good," Taigo said.

“We want to take you with us.” Morgan added, “Do you agree?”

“Sure, my dear. It is my pleasure.” Taigo replied cheerfully, “This will be the first time to ride the sea with you, Morgan.”

“We will also pay you handsomely.” Morgan promised.

“When would you start the trip?” Taigo asked.

“On Sunday at ten a.m.” Morgan replied.

“Good. I must go home now to prepare myself,” Taigo said.

“Good night,” Morgan said.

Taigo stood up and went to his house. Morgan went back to Jim. He looked at Morgan and said:

“Morgan, I’ll be the captain of the ship,” Jim said, “These men chose me as their captain.”

“Very good,” Morgan said.

“The workers shall start their duty from tomorrow,” Jim added.

Then, Jim stood up and walked out of the inn with Morgan. They went to the house through crowded streets.

"We will also pay you handsomely." Morgan promised.

"My dear, you were speaking to a strange black man. Who is he?" Jim asked.

"He's the best African hunter." Morgan replied, "His name is Taigo."

"Taigo?" Jim asked in surprise, "Systen told me about him. He really looks very strong. Systen has already told me about him. I shall return and inform…."

"No, sir. No need for you to go and tell him." Morgan said quickly, "I have already told him about the journey."

"Well done, Morgan," Jim said.

Finally, they arrived home. Rosa welcomed them.

"Do you want to eat or drink something?" Rosa asked.

"No, my dear," Jim said with a smile, "I drank tea in the nearby inn. I am tired and I shall sleep. Sikes also can sleep because I'll take him tomorrow to let him see the work."

"For me, I want to sleep only," Morgan said.

Morgan was sleepy, indeed. He went to his room and slept. Jim went to his room and slept, too.

Rosa prepared Jim and Sikes' clothes and went to sleep.

//////////////////////////

On the following day, Jim, Morgan and Sikes woke up early in the morning. They went to the port. They waited for the workers. When the clock struck seven a.m., the workers began their work. They prepared a strong ship called Lingnerland. They started storing necessary supplies. Jim and Sikes were looking over the works and arrangements.

"I think that the journey will be very enjoyable," Sikes said happily, "I want to see how you kill large whales."

Jim smiled and said nothing. He and Sikes walked a little. They met Systen.

"Good morning," Systen said, "Who is this boy?"

"He is my son. He will go with us," Jim replied, "I'll train him to ride the sea with us."

"A man who called Shomo wants to go with us. He is an African man," Systen said, "But I know that he's a cannibal."

“Don’t be silly. The law forbids cannibalism as you know,” Jim said, “He can’t dare to harm us. He can go with us if he wants.” Systen went inside the port.

Jim told his son many things about the sea. He told him about seasickness, pirates, tropical fevers and storms. Meanwhile, the crew members were also working with the workers. All of them collected and stored barrels of food, water and drinks. They stored some guns and pistols to use them to defend themselves against pirates. They also arranged fishing tools such as spears, hooks, nets and sandworms. Thus, they stored a large quantity of supplies enough for almost two years.

Morgan went to visit Taigo to tell him about the preparations. Unfortunately, Taigo’s wife told him bad news. She told him that her husband is ill and may not be able to accompany them. Morgan got surprised and felt sorry. He went back and told Jim about the illness of Taigo.

“How? Why? We are here till Sunday. We will see if he recovers or not,” Jim said.

Jim walked with Sikes to the ship. He went to his room, sat on a chair and began to plan the trip.

Sikes went to the deck and enjoyed looking at the sea. He watched sea birds which were flying over the ship and diving to hunt fish.

On Saturday, the sky was clear and the wind was blowing gently. The crew worked harder than before. Finally, they finished their work at Saturday night. They were very tired. They went to the inn, ate dinner and drank wine. Jim, Sikes and Morgan went home. Sikes was very happy and enthusiastic. That night, he couldn't sleep for a long time. He was thinking and dreaming about the journey and hunting whales.

Chapter 3
The Sailing

On Sunday morning, Jim, Sikes and Morgan prepared themselves and walked out to the port. Rosa and her two children followed them to the port. The crew were paying farewell to their families. Sikes kissed his mother gently and paid farewell to her and his brothers. Systen was standing at the door of the ship as all the people who board the ship must be Christians. The African hunters were worshiping idols, but they were allowed to board the ship as they were good hunters. No other idolator can board the ship. Morgan went to Taigo's house to speed up his coming and accompanying them, but Taigo was still ill. Morgan returned quickly to Lingnerland and told Jim about Taigo's condition and his inability to accompany them.

The ship started to depart. Jim was the captain of the ship. The sailors waved their hands to their families. There were six cookers, five officers, four African hunters, a doctor and twenty members of the crew. All the crew were hunters, but the four African hunters; Shomo, Taisam, Sheigo and Malgo, were the best. The six cookers were women. They were Andy, Achley, Rachel, Lucie, Emaily and Emanda. The five officers were Systen, Sapt, Fagin, Darnay and Robert. The doctor was called George. Lingnerland headed towards the east on the Atlantic Ocean. Sikes was watching the stretches of the sea happily.

//////////////////////////

When Lingnerland became far away from the coast, the crew started putting the sandworms on their hooks. They also threw the nets to hunt the Salomon and sardine. Morgan was holding his hook for a long time. He was half asleep. Suddenly, something pulled the hook and started resisting him.

"Help, help." Morgan shouted, "I caught a fish. It is a tuna."

Some men rushed to help him. The tuna was very strong. It tried to push itself into the depth of the ocean, but the crew was stronger. They pulled up the tuna to the surface of the water. Shomo shot a spear to its face. Sheigo shot another spear. Malgo shot another spear, but to its chest. In few minutes, the tuna was half dead. Its blood coloured the water.

"Pull it up quickly before sharks smell the blood and come here to trouble us." A man shouted.

The men pulled it, put it on the deck of the ship and started to cut its skin. Then, they stored the meat in a special room. They were surrounding the meat with charcoal to forbid its decomposition. Sikes was sleeping at that time. He woke up and saw the stored meat. He asked his father:

"What are these?"

"These are tuna's meat." Jim replied.

Sikes was sad because he couldn't see how did they hunt the tuna.

"Don't be sad, my dear." Jim replied, "We will hunt more later on."

Sikes decided to remain near hunters to see how they hunt tuna. After seeing some sharks swim swiftly around the nets, the crew pulled out their nets quickly. They were full of Salomon. They stored the Salomon in the special room.

"Wow, that's good. Store them," Jim said, "We would get lots of money."

"We will hunt more tuna Mr. Fritz," Systen said enthusiastically, "Then, we shall think about hunting whales."

Chapter 4
The Thief

The crew continued their journey. Suddenly, a man caught another tuna. Some men rushed to help him. Sikes was eager to see how they will deal with the hunted tuna. He watched carefully.

The men shot the tuna with their spears. At that moment, an orca whale was swimming few yards away from them. It heard the tuna move and hit water violently. It swam towards the tuna. The orca whale attacked it, pulled it strongly into the deep water to snatch it away.

"What? An orca?!" Sapt wondered, "This foolish whale is stealing our hunt. Pull the hook."

All the men pulled the hook together. The orca ate half of the tuna's body. It left the other half to them. When the crew pulled the tuna, most of the skin had disappeared. No head and no tail! The crew got annoyed. When the orca came to the surface to take a breath, the crew saw it.

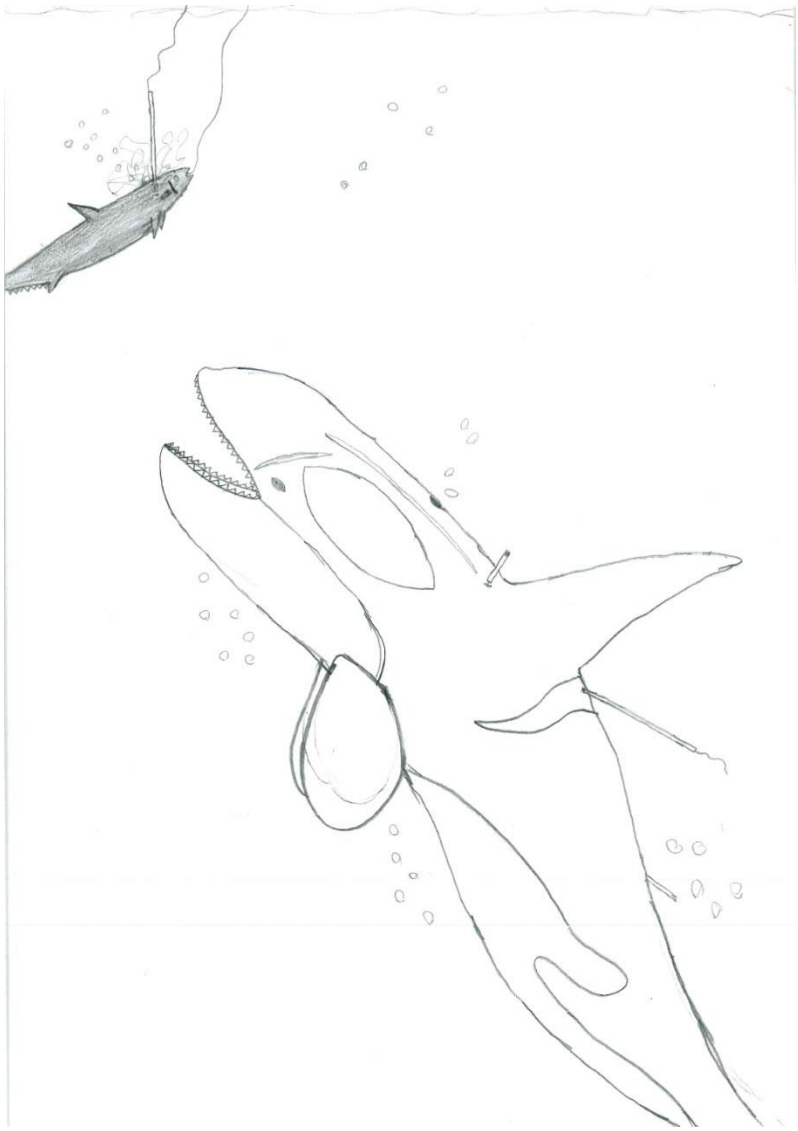
"Tylo Frip?!" Taisam asked in surprise.

"What's this?" Jim asked.

"The seamen call it that way." Taisam replied, "It's the strongest and most intelligent whale in the world. Look! It's brown. It's different from the other orca whales. It's very dangerous if you confront it."

"It isn't stronger than us." Jim mocked. "Look! It has three red lines on its face."

"Yes, this makes it more different from other



The orca whale attacked it, pulled it strongly into the deep water to snatch it away.

orca whales," Taisam said.

This orca whale was a strange whale. All the orca whales are black on the back and white on the belly, but this one was brown on the back and white on the belly. All the orca whales are smart, but this one was smarter. All the orca whales are about nine meters, but this one was eighteen meters long. It could jump higher than other orca whales. It was also faster than other orca whales.

The crew was angry and disappointed. They threw the dead tuna back to the water and sailed away. Sikes was angry for that and sorry for not seeing the tuna hunted. Tylo Frip was clever and it knew that this ship is a hunting ship. Therefore, it followed the ship quietly. Some sharks also came and ate the remaining of tuna's body. The poor tuna turned into white bones and sank into the ocean.

On the following day, the crew started to eat breakfast.

"We will continue hunting tuna after we lost one yesterday," Robert said.

"That whale had angered me, indeed," Darnay said disgustfully, "I wanted to kill it yesterday."

"Stop talking about yesterday's loss," Jim said,

“We must think about future gains. Now, we are far away from that orca. It won’t do it again.”

The crew started their work after finishing their breakfast. Half an hour later, Darnay caught a tuna. Shomo shot a spear on it. A man shot another spear. A pond of blood surrounded the tuna. Suddenly, Tylo Frip jumped above the surface and fell on the tuna. Consequently, the tuna was freed from the hook, but Tylo Frip caught it and tore it into pieces. The crew was shocked and their faces turned red.

“This whale is mocking us.” A man shouted.

“Father, I think that this whale doesn’t know how to hunt that is why it’s stealing the hunt,” Sikes said angrily, “Let’s teach it a lesson.”

“How can that be?” Jim asked in surprise.

Systen gave a great cry of anger and took a spear.

“I must kill it. It’s destroying our trade,” He shouted, “I’ll teach it a lesson.”

He stood on the timber bar of the ship and shot the spear at it.

“That is folly. You will fall into the water.” Shomo shouted. But Systen didn’t listen to him.

The spear stabbed the whale. Systen shot another spear at it, but he lost his balance and fell into the water. Before they could know what will happen, Tylo Frip hit Systen by its tail. He flew into the air in arch shape.

"Help, help. Somebody helps." He screamed, "My God, help me."

Then, he fell into the water far away from the ship and disappeared forever. The crew was shocked. They led the ship to another direction to avoid the whale. However, Tylo Frip noticed that the ship had diverted to another direction. It continued to follow it, but the crew did not observe it.

"Tylo Frip is a thief. We are losing a lot of money because of that mad whale," Jim said angrily, "We must kill it next time if it steals our hunt again."

"This whale is strange," Sapt said, "I know that orca whales are strong and clever. They hunt their food and do not steal. Why does Tylo Frip behave strangely in this way in spite of its big size that enables it to hunt for itself?"

"No, orca whales usually do this, but they do that once only and go to their way. We should see." Jim replied, "If it comes again, we shall colour the sea with its blood."

"Yes, you are right," A man said, "We would kill it next time. We waited for a long time to hunt a tuna, it snatched it from us. I am disappointed, indeed."

The crew decided to take some rest after a long time of waiting for a tuna. The weather was sunny and hot. Jim was angry and pale.

"If that whale attacks our hunt again, I shall not spare its life," Jim said, "Enough is enough. I can't endure more than this."

"The tuna is about two hundred kilograms," Fagin added, "All these kilograms are entering into Tylo's belly. That's unacceptable."

"Do you think that Tylo Frip is following us?" Jim asked, "It did it yesterday."

"Maybe, we don't know," A man replied.

"We will kill it next time," Jim said, "Now, let's go and hunt."

Chapter 5
Sikes' Death

The crew continued their work after taking some rest. Sapt caught a tuna. The crew rushed to help. They shot two spears into its body. Suddenly, Tylo Frip jumped and, violently, devoured a large part of the tuna. The crew got shocked and became, extremely, angry. Jim and Sikes were mad with anger. Jim stabbed the whale. Sikes took a spear and said:

"Please, father, I am a good swimmer. Give me a chance to jump into the sea and fight it."

"Are you mad?" Jim asked in surprise, "How dare you jump into the sea and fight an orca whale?"

"That whale is very dangerous," Sapt said.

"Father, let me fight it," Sikes requested, "If anything happens to me, you can send the hunters to help me."

"No need to do that, Sikes." Jim objected, "The hunters will take up the task and fight it."

"No father, this will train me to fight whales." Sikes said, "The whale will not be able to do anything to me."

Jim refused, but Sikes continued to request his father. Finally, Jim agreed.

“My brave son, you can go. May God bless and help you,” Jim said happily, “I’ll defend you.”

Sikes thanked his father and jumped into the water to face the whale. Tylo Frip saw him and thought that this fellow must be the one who had stabbed it. It decided to avenge.

Jim waited for his son for a long time. He did not appear. Jim was very worried.

“The orca whales are really a kind of dolphins, but sometimes they become more dangerous than sharks,” Darnay said, “They can feast on everything even the biggest whales.”

“Perhaps, it harmed Sikes. Darnay is right.” Morgan added.

Jim was very afraid after listening to them. Suddenly, Morgan shouted, “Look! Sir, there is some blood on the surface of water.”

Jim saw the blood coloring water and he gave a great cry of fear.

“Don’t be afraid, Jim. It might be the whale’s blood,” Sapt said.

Jim didn’t answer him and he jumped into the Tylo Frip saw him and thought that this fellow must be the one who had stabbed it. It decided to avenge.

water. Ten men took spears and followed him. Sometimes later, they came to the surface and boarded the ship with Sikes' body. They put Sikes' dead body on the deck. Jim looked at Sikes' smashed head and broken jaw. His chest was wet with blood. Jim screamed loudly till he scared the sea birds which were sitting on the mast poles or flying over Lingnerland.

"I am a fool," Jim said, "Stupid, ugly, clumsy and mad."

He ran up and down the ship like a mad creature and howled like an animal. After he had been tired, he sat on the ground and wept loudly. The crew surrounded him to console him and halted hunting activities on that day.

On the following day, the crew decided to hunt some tuna.

"Hunting tuna won't be useful," Morgan said.

"Why?" Sapt asked.

"I think that the whale is still following us." Morgan replied.

Sapt was puzzled and decided to meet Jim who was sitting in his room and mourning his son.

"Please, that is enough," Sapt said kindly,

"Will we hunt or return to New York?"

"Return to New York." Jim replied sadly.

"I'll drive the ship to New York," Sapt said.

Sapt went to the driving cabin and left Jim alone. Jim was angry and sad and no one dared to speak to him.

Chapter 6
With the Police

Four days later, the ship arrived at New York Beach. The customs of the port were surprised because there was no whales' oil nor sufficient hunt; only one tuna and some Salomon. The crew told them about what Tylo Frip had done to them. They told them about Sikes and Systen's death.

Jim did not want to see his wife. He was ashamed of his foolishness and recklessness.

"I want to go to the inn. I don't want to go home," Jim said.

Morgan said, "Don't worry. Tell Rosa what had happened. She has to know everything. She will understand you and accept what destiny has decided."

"No, I don't want to meet her." Jim insisted.

"You have to go home sooner or later," Morgan said, "Go to her house and tell her what happened. She has to know the reality."

Jim accepted to go and meet Rosa. He arrived home and knocked the door. Rosa opened the door.

"Mr. Jim, how are you? You came so soon." She said, "We were…."

She stopped talking to look for Sikes. She was shocked to see Jim without Sikes.

"Where is Sikes?" She asked.

Jim bowed his head to the ground and didn't answer.

"Where is Sikes?" Rosa asked again.

Jim said nothing. Morgan stood near him and decided to speak out.

"Please, tell me where Sikes is." Rosa requested, "Tell me."

Jim entered the house and walked to his room. Rosa and Morgan followed him. Rosa was very worried. Jim looked at her and told her about the dangerous whale Tylo Frip and the story of the death of Sikes. Rosa screamed loudly.

"Hush, don't scream this way." Jim ordered,

“People will think that there is a murder here.”

“Why did you send him to that whale?” Rosa asked with eyes full of tears, “Why did you accept his request to fight that whale?”

“I told you the story. I don’t want to repeat everything again.” Jim replied, “He insisted and I couldn’t refuse.”

“You are a stupid fellow.” Rosa shouted angrily, “He can’t hunt a fish. Why did you send him to a killer whale?”

“I am sorry. I have committed a great mistake.” Jim apologized.

“Sorry? Sorry after what?” Rosa shouted, “After you lost your son?”

“This happened by mistake, you young devil,” Jim said with a rough voice, “Don’t let me slap you.”

“Slap me and tell people that you are the most stupid creature in the world,” Rosa shouted.

“Stop talking nonsense. You are the reason behind these problems,” Jim said, “Why did you ask me to take Sikes with me?”

“I asked you to take him with you, but I didn’t order you to throw him to killer whales,” Rosa shouted angrily, “I am not guilty at all.”

"If you had not convinced me to take him with me, this would haven't happened at all." Jim shouted nervously.

"You have nothing to say, Jim. You are wrong, but you are trying to defend yourself and justify your mistake." Rosa shouted as loud as she could, "You sent Sikes to the whale and it killed him. That means you killed him. You killed my son. Go away, you murderer."

As Jim and Rosa were arguing near the window, Jim was afraid that the people may come and attack him because of her dangerous accusation.

"Don't speak about murder," Jim said angrily, "Are you mad?"

Rosa was very angry and lost her mind. She hit a nearby table and wept loudly.

"Stop it. Don't act like a mad monkey," Jim shouted at her.

"I'll do this, you criminal man." Rosa screamed loudly.

Jim got furious, grabbed Rosa's long hair and beat Rosa. Morgan was shocked.

"Stop, stop." Morgan shouted.

"Leave me, you wicked man." Rosa screamed.

Jim pressed her against the wall.

"You deserve the worst," Jim said angrily.

Rosa pushed herself away from Jim. She ran to the window and cried.

"Help, help. A criminal is in my house. Help, help…."

Jim pushed Rosa to the ground. She got scared and screamed loudly. She was very afraid that Jim may actually kill her. She closed her eyes and stopped moving. Neighbors heard Rosa's calling for help. They were puzzled and called the police.

"What? How can you do that to your wife, Jim?" Morgan asked in surprise, "Is she dead?"

Jim bent to touch her chest.

"No, nothing happened. She just fainted," Jim said.

Then, they heard a knock on the door. Jim cursed Rosa because she brought troubles to him. Both of them were worried. Morgan walked to the door and opened it. He saw a crowd of people behind a policeman.

"What was happening?" The policeman asked, "Neighbors informed us that there is a cry of a woman in this house."

"A man quarreled with his wife and she fainted." Morgan replied.

"And who are you?" The policeman asked.

"I am his servant." Morgan replied.

"Why did the woman say that someone is killing her?" The policeman asked.

"Because she was angry only." Morgan replied.

"Angry? What do you mean by the word angry?" The policeman asked, "I think that you are lying."

"Why not? She became angry with her husband and accused him of murder." Morgan replied.

"I am not believing you at all," The policeman said, "Let me go in and see that if you are saying the truth or not. You will go to the prison if you are a liar."

Morgan took the policeman to the room. Some people entered the house and followed the policeman who stood near the fainted woman.

"What is this?" He asked, "Is she dead?"

"No, she is alive. Check her heart-beating to be sure that what I am saying is true." Jim replied.

"We will take all of you to the police center and know what had happened exactly," The policeman said.

Jim walked with the policeman. Morgan and another neighbor supported Rosa till she reached the police center. Jim's two children were shocked. They were hiding themselves in a room. They came out and followed their parents to the police center.

Jim told the police officer about the whole story.

"She committed a mistake by accusing you of murder," The policeman said.

"Yes, she was…." Jim said

"But you also committed a mistake by sending your son to the whale," The policeman said, "Why have you done that?"

Jim looked at the ground and said nothing.

"You made a grave mistake. You will be punished," The policeman said.

Jim got scared and decided to defend himself.

"But the boy requested me a lot. I couldn't…." Jim said.

"No, this is not an excuse. You weren't supposed to allow your son to go and confront the whale," The policeman said. "Your son wasn't trained to fight whales. Why did you allow him to go to the whale?"

"I am sorry," Jim said.

"But 'sorry' will not work in such a situation. You will be punished. Your file will be referred to the prosecutor and court. The court will either imprison you or order you to pay a fine," The policeman said.

Jim was happy and thought that this isn't a scary punishment as he is a rich man and he will pay the fine.

Jim pretended that he was afraid from this punishment, but he was happy.

"Although this is an unfair punishment, but I'll oblige to it," Jim said to the policemen.

Rosa opened her eyes and found herself in the police center. She saw Jim speaking to the policemen.

"But you hit your wife badly," The policeman said.

"Because she accused me of murder," Jim replied, "That was the reason behind hitting her. She wanted to put me in more troubles."

"Shut up, you cruel man. You were about to kill me," Rosa shouted.

Jim pressed his teeth together in anger.

"Why did you speak about murder?" Jim asked angrily.

"You were also wrong," The policeman said to Rosa, "You were not supposed to accuse him of murder. You will be pardoned this time, but don't repeat the same again."

After completion of investigations, Jim went to the court and accepted to pay the fine. Then, Jim and Rosa were freed. They went home. Each one stayed in a separate room as they were angry with each other.

"I won't serve you any food or drink. Try to help yourself," Rosa said, "Moreover, I won't forgive you unless you kill that whale and hang its body in the port."

Jim ignored her and went to his room. He sat on a chair and started to think about killing Tylo Frip.

Sometimes later, one of the two children went to Morgan and said:

"My mother wants to speak to you. Come and meet her."

Morgan went to Rosa's room.

"Morgan, what has been done with Sikes' body?" Rosa asked.

"We threw it into the sea," Morgan replied.

"What? How dare you do that?" Rosa asked.

"Because his body began to decompose after three days of his death," Morgan said, "We had no coffin to put him in, so we were not having another option, but to throw his body into the sea."

"But he became the food of sharks," Rosa said in grief.

"His body began to decompose before we arrive the beach. There was no other choice than to do that," Morgan replied, "Therefore, we were forced to throw him into the sea."

Then, Morgan went quickly to Jim's room.

Chapter 7
The Revenge

Jim has been thinking about his wife's words for three days. He was angry with Rosa and thinking about Tylo Frip. Finally, he decided to take revenge.

"Morgan, we shall go on another hunting journey," Jim said to Morgan, "We didn't hunt any whale in the previous journey. We will travel on the same ship which is called Lingnerland. Tell the fishermen and whale hunters, especially, Taigo about the proposed journey. We will take him with us whether he is ill or not because he will help us in hunting whales. He looks strong and hefty. He may be very well now. Today is Tuesday. We will go on Friday."

Morgan moved to summon the same officers and crew so as to tell them about the proposed journey. Jim hired more people to increase the number of his sailors.

//////////////////////////

Jim was interested to know more about orca whales. He visited one of his friends. He was a scientist of sea creatures. The scientist welcomed him and gave him a cup of rum.

"Sir, I want to ask you," Jim said, "Do orca whales live in Atlantic Ocean?"

"Yes, they do," The scientist replied, "They live in all oceans, seas and gulfs."

"Good," Jim said with a smile, "Where do they live exactly in Atlantic Ocean?"

"This is a strange question and it had no answer," The scientist replied, "They live everywhere in the Atlantic Ocean."

"Do they live near islands of the Atlantic Ocean?" Jim asked.

"Yes, to eat seals," The scientist replied, "Why are you asking about orca whales?"

"I want just to have more information about them," Jim replied, "Do you know about an orca whale called Tylo Frip?"

"I heard about it, but I don't care about it," The scientist replied, "It's only a strange orca whale. Why do you ask me about Tylo Frip? You are not an orca's hunter."

"The whale which is called Tylo Frip steals the hunters' hunt. We are puzzled by this strange whale," Jim said, "We want to kill it. Killing it would be very useful as it is attacking our hunt."

"But this whale is very dangerous as I heard," The scientist warned, "It will…."

"No, I don't care about that. I must leave now. Thank you," Jim said.

Then, he paid farewell to the scientist and departed quickly. Jim started becoming nervous when he hears someone speaks about Tylo's strength.

//////////////////////////

On Friday morning, Morgan and Taigo walked together to Lingnerland. Sapt was standing near the door of the ship. He was controlling people's boarding the ship.

"Stop, who are you?" Sapt asked Taigo sharply.

"He is my friend," Morgan replied.

"What is his name? What is his religion?" Sapt asked.

Taigo showed Sapt his personal papers. Sapt read them and looked at Taigo.

"Your name is Taigo, but you worship the idols," Sapt said, "You won't enter the ship."

Taigo raised his spear and asked, "You know this, don't you?"

Sapt nodded in surprise.

"Just imagine, that door's nail is a whale's heart," Taigo said.

Then, he shot the spear towards the nail of the door. He was so accurate that the spear hit the nail directly and fell on the ground. Taigo walked, took the spear and came back to Sapt.

"Now, the whale is dead," Taigo said to Sapt.

Sapt got fully satisfied with Taigo's exceptional skills. He, immediately, wrote Taigo's name in the list of the crew and thus he became one of the sailors of Lingnerland.

No one saw the captain of the ship till that moment.

“Where is Jim?” Fagin asked.

“I think that he is ill or mad after his son’s death,” Sapt, sarcastically, replied, “He always disappears from us.”

“He is always angry because his wife has quarreled with him,” Morgan replied.

An order came to the crew to start moving. Half an hour later, the ship sailed away from the beach. Jim didn’t appear and no one saw him for two days. Even some of the crew thought that he hadn’t boarded the ship at all.

On Monday morning, the crew saw Jim walking on the ship’s deck. His face was pale. He was holding a long stick. He called Morgan and said:

“Morgan, summon all the crew for an important meeting.”

Morgan did what Jim ordered him to do. The crew stood and waited for what Jim will say.

"Morgan, summon all the crew for an important meeting."

Chapter 8
Death to Tylo Frip!

Jim stood in front of his men and looked at them carefully.

"Gentlemen, I summoned all of you to speak to you about an important matter," Jim said, "I want to ask you. What will you do when you see a whale?"

"We call out the men to hunt it," A man replied.

"What will you do after that?" Jim asked.

"Lower the hunting boats and go to fight the whale," Darnay replied.

"Will you do that with my enemy?" Jim asked.

"Who is your enemy?" A man asked.

Jim sighed loudly and took out a small box from his pocket.

"The man who will see a brown orca whale will take this box," Jim said.

"What is in that box?" Robert asked.

"Hundred gold coins," Jim replied and showed them the gold coins.

The crew looked at the box with greedy eyes. They knew the whale which Jim was speaking about.

"Hurray, we will," They shouted.

"I think that I know this whale," Taigo replied.

Jim looked at Taigo and he was happy to see Taigo with him in this journey.

"Has it three red lines on its face?" Taigo asked.

"Yes," Jim replied with a smile.

"Does it jump very high?" Taigo asked.

"Yes, it does," Jim replied.

"Does it steal the hunters' hunt?" Taigo asked.

"Yes, it does," Jim replied.

"The whale's name is Tylo Frip, isn't it?" Taigo asked.

Jim got annoyed when he heard the whale's name.

"Yes, my Taigo. It's my enemy," Jim replied pressing his teeth together in anger.

Jim called Morgan and whispered something into his ear. Morgan went to the cabin and returned to the deck. He was holding a big box and a very long spear. The crew looked at the big box and thought that it has more gold coins in it.

"This box is filled up with spyglasses," Jim said, "Use them to watch the sea and spot Tylo Frip."

Jim raised his spear and said, “This is my special spear. A blacksmith made it for me. It is bigger than your spears. It is sharp and fast. I’ll use it to tear Tylo’s heart.”

Jim’s face turned red when he mentioned Tylo Frip.

“I’ll tell you something,” Taigo said, “I saw Tylo Frip before two years. It stole our hunt. Our crew got angry and fought it. After a long battle, a brave man marked a red line near its left eye. I fought it also and marked a red line on the right side of its face. Another man marked a third red line on the left side of its face. But we could not kill it. The whale got defeated and swam away.”

“You are a brave and strong hunter. Why couldn’t you kill it?” Jim asked, “If I were you, I wouldn’t spare its life. Any way!”

“That is the whale which made me suffer,” Jim went on saying, “I lost my son. My wife quarreled with me. All that because of that foolish whale. I took you in this journey because of this important thing. I must take revenge. I’ll be a fool if I don’t take revenge. We sailed to search for it. The law says that the murderer must be killed. You must understand that Tylo Frip is the trade destroyer. We will sail around the whole world in search for it. I shall not allow you to return to New York till we kill it. Then, we will take its body to the beach, cut its meat into pieces and put it in restaurants."

"Death to Tylo Frip!" He shouted loudly.

"Death to Tylo Frip! Death to Tylo Frip! Death to Tylo Frip!" Some sailors also shouted loudly.

Fagin was the wisest man in the ship. He was keeping quiet and didn't say a word. Then, he said:

"Mr. Fritz, I am ready to fight that ugly whale. I'll accept if that was the part of the whale hunting program which we went out for and not to carry out a revenge on Tylo Frip."

"All the crew have already agreed," Jim said angrily, "We won't hunt anything except Tylo Frip. Do you understand?"

The crew was surprised. They wanted to hunt whales, too.

"In addition to Tylo Frip, we want to hunt more whales," A man said, "What would we say to the customs of the port when they see us go back with only one whale?"

"I know what to say," Jim replied, "Now, let's go to eat breakfast and curse Tylo Frip."

The men went to take their breakfast, but they weren't happy. Jim summoned the African hunters and looked at them carefully.

"Give me a promise that you will kill Tylo Frip," Jim said.

"We will, we will," The hunters shouted enthusiastically. Jim felt happy and went to his room.

Fagin, alone, opposed the captain, but he kept quiet. The sailors were looking at the sea with their spyglasses to spot Tylo Frip. Each one wanted to have that box of gold coins.

Morgan went to the kitchen to drink some water. He passed by Jim's room and heard something which made him very shocked. He heard two voices. The first one was Jim's voice. The second was that of a stranger.

"Yes, Fritz, you are right. You must kill it," The stranger said, "You have to obey your wife's orders. Am I right?"

"Yes, you are right," Jim said, "I'll get rid of it. Don't worry."

"Don't listen to anyone, like Fagin, who tries to stop you," The stranger added, "If anyone tries to stop you, you can use your pistol and silence him."

"No need for that, my dear. No one dares to stop me," Jim said, "If this happens, I can stop them by other means."

Morgan was shocked by the way the stranger instigates Jim. He tried to see them through the window, but it was locked. He went to the kitchen.

"That strange devil will destroy Jim by instigating him against Tylo Frip," Morgan said to himself.

Morgan returned again passing by Jim's room. He heard the strange man encouraging Jim by saying:

"Listen! I'll give you part of this money if you kill Tylo Frip."

"Thank you, Boxtel," Jim said.

Morgan went to his room quickly. He was thinking about the stranger.

"Boxtel…Boxtel," He repeated "Who is this man?"

"Ah, he's, our neighbor. He looks very wicked," Morgan said to himself, "Why is he behaving that way? I'll try to stop him. He's a pirate on our ship."

On the very following day, Robert shouted happily from the crow nest of the ship:

"Tylo Frip, it's there. I saw it first."

The crew came running to see it. They saw a brown body with red lines. They thought that Robert is a lucky man. Jim came there and looked at the body appearing on the surface of water. He was mad with happiness.

"Lower the boats," Jim screamed.

In a moment, the boats were on the surface of the water. Few men stayed on the ship. The rest of the men followed Jim to win the box of gold coins. Jim's boat was in front of the other boats. He took Taigo with him. He saw a brown body with brown snakes and got surprised.

"Look! A brown body with brown snakes," Jim said to Taigo.

"Yes, but I can't see it properly," Taigo replied, "I think that it has some defenders just like snakes."

"Silly whale!" Jim said angrily.

A man looked at it carefully. He was surprised.

"Sir, I think that this isn't Tylo Frip," The man said, "It is something else. Look! How small it is!"

Jim looked at the creature carefully. He was puzzled.

"Let me be sure," Jim said. Then, he shot it with his spear. He pulled up the body and noticed that it was light.

"No, it's a squid," He said angrily, "I wish that it were Tylo Frip."

The squid died after Jim stabbed it. Its color was brown with lined body. The lines were red. The snakes were nothing but its hands. Jim threw the squid angrily to the sea. The men laughed loudly. Robert was frustrated. Jim returned to the ship with disappointment. He boarded the ship angrily.

"Why did it colour itself in that way?" He grumbled, "Stupid squid!"

Fagin met him, smiled and said:

"Your mind is very much engaged by that whale. Why don't you change your attitudes towards it?" Jim stared at him angrily and said:

"No, I'll kill it. I won't change my attitudes towards it. You can't stop me. No way! Stop advising me and go away, otherwise, I'll tie your hands and legs with a strong rope and throw you into the sea." After saying this to Fagin, Jim went to his cabin quickly.

Fagin was surprised. He looked at Morgan.

“Jim became a bad-tempered man,” He said, “I am sorry for that. I couldn’t make him stop thinking about his mad plans. That whale is very dangerous.”

“Don’t try to advise him again,” Morgan said, “He becomes angry very quickly.”

“Yes,” Fagin said and walked away. Morgan sat in his room and began to think of a plan.

“How can I change Jim’s mind?” He asked himself, “He wants only to kill Tylo Frip and therefore he forbids us from hunting whales. I’ll go and request him to let us hunt other whales. I’ll try my best.”

Morgan went to Jim’s room. Before he knocks the door, he heard Jim and Boxtel speaking together. He got annoyed, but he concealed his emotions and knocked the door. Both of them stopped talking.

“Come in,” Jim shouted.

Morgan entered the room and looked at Boxtel disgustfully. Suddenly, Morgan felt that he had no idea what to say as Boxtel was present. Finally, he spoke out:

“Sir, we are sailing on a good spot which is full of tuna and other types of fish. Can we start hunting them? They are very important for our business.

Don’t forget whales’ oil, too. It is important to hunt some of them.”

“Morgan! don’t speak about that. We won’t hunt anything,” Jim replied angrily.

“But you said that you wanted to take Taigo with you to help us in hunting whales,” Morgan added, “We…”

“I took him to help us in killing Tylo Frip,” Jim said, “Nothing else.”

“No problem. Can we hunt them after killing Tylo Frip?” Morgan asked, “This is better.”

“I don’t know,” Jim replied, “But I won’t surrender till Tylo Frip spouts red blood.”

Morgan was unhappy. He looked at Boxtel with eyes of resentment. He knows that it is Boxtel who charges Jim’s obstinacy. Boxtel also realized that Morgan hates him. He kept quiet at that moment, but hatched the intention of teaching Morgan a lesson. Morgan saw Jim was getting angry. He felt sorry for him. Then, he left the room.

“I think that this man is trying to imitate Fagin,” Boxtel said, “Don’t listen to them. He’s trying to discourage you indirectly. If he continues to do so, eradicate him from your way.”

"But you said that you wanted to take Taigo with you to help us in hunting whales," Morgan added.

"What?! No, I am not a fool to do that," Jim said, "He's my honest servant."

"But the honest servant doesn't stop in the way of his master's plans," Boxtel said, "Get rid of him."

"No, I don't want to do that, Boxtel," Jim said, "I don't even need to do that."

Chapter 9
The Storm

Three days later, darkness appeared in the horizon. The crew was worried. Jim looked at the dark clouds angrily.

"Nothing will scare us. We are whale hunters," Jim shouted at the clouds, "We aren't afraid of the silly wind. Jim shall not forgive Tylo Frip nor shall he surrender."

Sometimes later, Robert who was standing on the crow nest of the ship, saw a group of whales.

"A flock of sperm whales," He shouted, "They are near the huge waves."

The crew looked at the flock and wanted to hunt them.

The wind blew, violently, and the ship staggered, strongly. Huge waves hit the ship. The sky became darker and then, it started raining, heavily.

"The weather is very cold," A man grumbled.

"We can't go and hunt whales," Darnay said to the men, "Yes, the weather is cold and Jim is against the idea of commercial hunting. What shall we do? We want to hunt whales."

"We don't care about Jim nor do we care about the weather," Sapt said, "Hunting whales is very important. The reason behind our journey isn't only killing Tylo Frip. That is folly. We have to generate some income from hunting whales."

The men agreed, but their problem was Jim. They went to his room and requested him to let them hunt the sperm whales.

Jim stood up angrily and began to shout:

"What? We have no time. The weather is stormy."

"Please, we want to hunt one of them," Darnay said, "We will get some pocket money from marketing it."

"No, don't speak to me about that," Jim said angrily, “No way! We must kill Tylo Frip first.”

“But the sperm whales are in front of us,” A man said angrily, “Why don’t we hunt them?”

“No, stay on the ship. I’ll lead the ship to another direction,” Jim shouted nervously.

“We know that Tylo Frip is a thief,” Sapt said with a smile, “We can go and hunt the sperm whales. Tylo Frip may come to steal our hunt. Then, you can kill it easily. Am I right?”

Jim thought a little and agreed. The men cheered happily. They went outside and thanked Sapt joyfully. They lowered the boats and rowed towards the sperm whales. Jim stayed on the ship. As it was still raining heavily, the men couldn’t see the whales properly. Moreover, huge waves prevented the small boats from sailing smoothly.

Suddenly, a lightning lit the world around the crew. Thunder was loud and terrible. Fagin’s boat was in front of all boats. He held his spear tightly. His boat came near a mother sperm whale accompanied by its child. Morgan was with Fagin in the same boat. He was about to stab it. Suddenly, a huge wave hit their boat. The boat turned upside down and sank. Morgan, Fagin and other men of the sunk-boat swam towards other boats. They were rescued by those boats. The sperm whales noticed what was going on around them. They dived quickly into the depth of the ocean and became out of danger. The men got disappointed. Suddenly, a huge wave attacked the boats. They got filled up with water and two of them sank. The rest of the boats headed towards the ship. Many men were still swimming. Waves hit them, but they were good swimmers. Finally, all of them boarded Lingnerland.

"We apologize," A man said to Jim, "We couldn't hunt anything because of the violent storm."

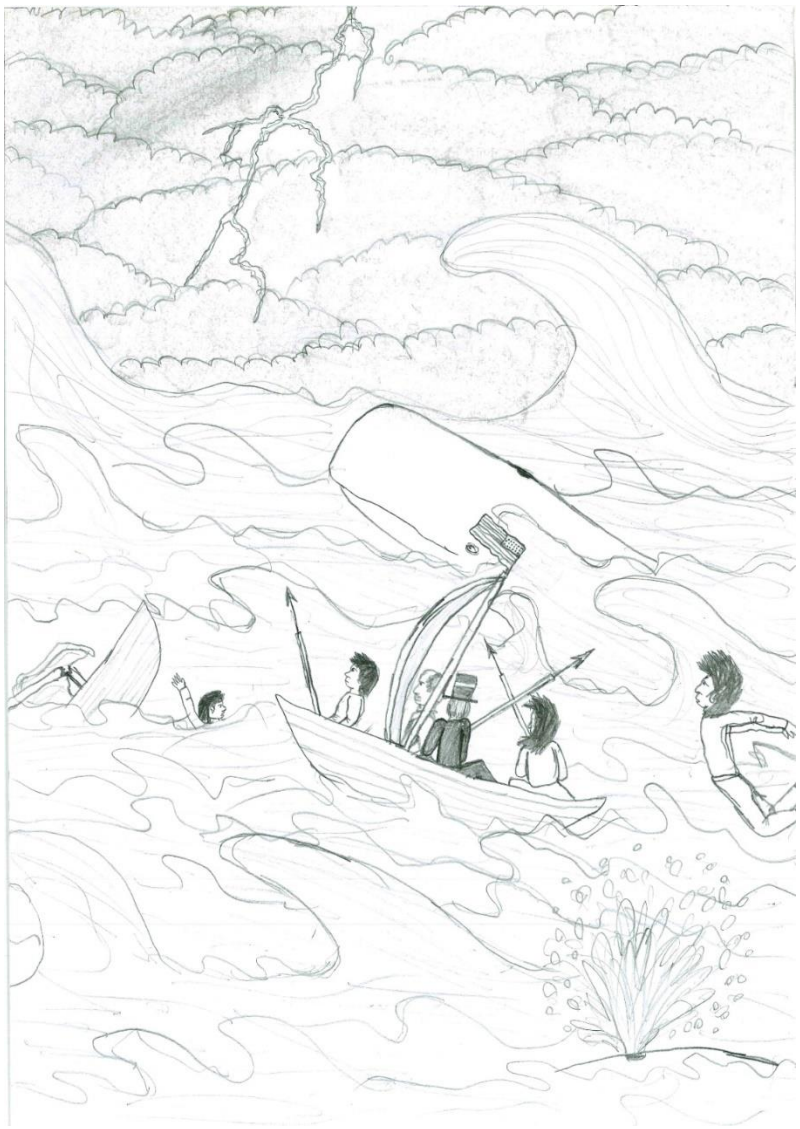
Jim got annoyed when he heard that.

"No, that can't be," Jim said, "That means Tylo Frip won't come here. Actually, I don't care about the whale's oil. This isn't the reason behind our journey. I want only Tylo Frip. You will kill it, won't you?"

"We will, we will," the crew shouted.

Jim went to his room. He continued speaking to Boxtel.

The storm was violent. Huge waves were hitting the ship.



The sperm whales noticed what was going on around them.

"This storm is coming from the north," Sapt said to Jim, "Shall we change our direction? I think that we will find more whales in the east."

"No, I think that Tylo Frip is near the north pole," Jim said, "We will continue our way to those places."

"What? The north pole? Are you mad?" Sapt asked, "How…"

"Shut up, Sapt. You are becoming arrogant day by day," Jim shouted, "I am the captain of the ship and not you and I know how to steer the ship."

"But you must steer the ship wisely," Sapt said, "The storm will destroy the ship."

"Shut up and leave me alone," Jim shouted at Sapt nervously, "Don't speak to me about that again, otherwise, I'll kill you. Go away."

Sapt was angry and he left the room. He met Fagin and told him about Jim's mad plans. Both of them were angry with Jim because he was taking them to more troubles.

Chapter 10
The Hunt

Six days later, the storm stopped. The sea was calm and the sky was clear. Suddenly, Robert shouted from the crow nest of the ship.

"There is a flock of sperm whales. Attack them," He shouted.

Jim ran from the cabin to the deck. After seeing the sperm whales, he returned to his room with disappointment. He sat alone in his room and smoked a little.

"Lower the boats," Fagin shouted.

The crew lowered the boats. They sailed towards the flock. They rowed near an old sperm whale. The boats began to surround it. The other sperm whales saw the boats and dived into the sea. The old whale was sleepy. Fagin ordered the men of his boat to row near the whale's head. The old whale saw the boats surrounding it. It got alerted, but it was too late.

"My Taigo, stab a sensitive place," Fagin said. Taigo looked at the whale carefully. Finally, he found a chance to stab its right eye accurately.

Fagin shouted, “Pull the rope.” Taigo pulled the rope. The spear removed the whale’s eye. Shomo, Malgo, Taisam and Sheigo rained it with more spears. Morgan had an idea. He ordered the men of his boat to row near the left eye. Sheigo stabbed the left eye and removed it, too. The old whale’s pain was terrible. Morgan shot the blowhole with his spear. The poor whale began to spout water which was mixed with blood.

Then, the crew stabbed its chest flippers and tail to make it swim slowly and weakly. A man stabbed one of the arteries of the tail. It began to bleed profusely. All the men continued to pour the whale with spears till it became like a hedgehog. Then, they pulled the ropes. The poor old whale started to swim slowly. Most of its blood was outside its body, therefore, it began to faint and turned upside down. This provided the men with a good chance to stab it fatally. Taigo stabbed the heart. The old whale tried to take a deep breath, but it could not. It spouted blood and died immediately. The men cheered happily. They looked at the sea to see whether Tylo Frip is near or not, but they saw nothing. They began to pull the big and heavy whale towards the ship.

A man saw the dead whale as it was being dragged towards the ship. He rushed to Jim to tell him the good news.

"Sir, they hunted a huge whale," The man said.

"Really? Did they see Tylo Frip?" Jim said.

"I do not think so," The man replied.

Jim got annoyed and looked down.

"Stupid men," he said angrily.

"But this is not the fault of men. Tylo Frip didn't come. I think that it is far away from here. Am I right?" The man said.

"Okay, go away," Jim said.

Jim went outside to see the hunted whale. The men tied the whale along the timber bar of the ship. They were very happy.

"I hope that you can kill Tylo Frip in the same way," Jim said, "I hope that I can see Tylo Frip in the same condition."

The men decided to have some of the whale's meat in dinner. The crew cooked whale's meat and Jim enjoyed it with them.

"If we kill Tylo Frip, we must eat its meat," Jim said.

"How? Orca's meat is not eatable," Fagin said.

"We will do that," Jim replied angrily, "Nothing can stop us."

"I am not trying to stop you. You may eat it, but its meat may be harmful," Fagin said.

"How silly! You are just joking," Jim mocked "Stop talking and finish your meal. The crew will eat Tylo" He looked at the men and said, "Won't you?"

"We will, we will," the men said.

Fagin continued eating his food and didn't say anything. Morgan looked at Fagin and put a finger on the mouth; gesturing silence. He wanted Fagin to stop advising Jim.

On the following day, the crew started cutting the whale. There was a thick layer of fat, like the crust of the orange, surrounds the body. The African hunters made an opening in the skin, put in a huge hook to remove out pieces of fat and take them to a special room. The men, in that room, cut and stored them. The fats which were taken out from this whale were enough to fill a hundred barrels, but the men had more important work. It was the whale's oil which is found in a huge place called sac in the forehead of the sperm whale. Taigo decided to do this job. The cutter must be very careful not to make a hole in this sensitive sac, otherwise, the oil will spill out and they will lose 500 gallons of oil.

Taigo descended to the whale's head using a rope. Shomo gave him a small spade. Taigo pecked the whale's skin with the spade to know its thickness. He found a good spot to start from. An iron bucket was tied with rope and lowered to Taigo by two men. Then, Taigo lowered the bucket into the whale's head. He made a signal to the two men to pull up the bucket. The two men pulled up the bucket which was full of whale's oil. They emptied it into a large base. Then, they gave the bucket back to Taigo. They continued doing this till evening. Finally, they filled up the barrels with the oil. The crew was very happy as they would get lots of money.

Jim was smoking and studying a map when the crew was working to collect the oil. He was trying to know where do orca whales usually live. He discovered that some of them reach either near the north or south pole to eat seals, penguins, polar bears and monk whales. Jim was worried as he thought that he won't find Tylo Frip easily.

Morgan told Jim how they succeeded in killing the whale and collecting oil.

"That's very nice," Jim said in surprise, "I'll go and tell the crew something."

Jim stood up and walked to the deck. He spoke loudly.

"Morgan told me about how you succeeded in killing the whale. I was glad to hear this," Jim said, "If we meet Tylo, you must kill it in the same way. Kill it to have the box!"

The men were enthusiastic when they heard the word, box. They decided to watch the sea for a long time. Jim was happy and went to his room.

////////////////////////////////

Two days later, Robert shouted from the crow nest of Lingnerland.

"A grey whale. It's in front of us," He shouted.

The crew saw the grey whale and lowered the boats. Jim saw it, too. "I know that orca whales eat grey whales," Jim said, "Try to hunt it violently so that Tylo Frip may come here."

Hunting the grey whales was difficult because they have strong tails and tough skins. They can challenge everything even the orca whales. Despite its strength, the crew decided to kill the grey whale so as to get its oil. The whale was worried when it saw the boats. It increased the speed of its swimming. They began to chase it.

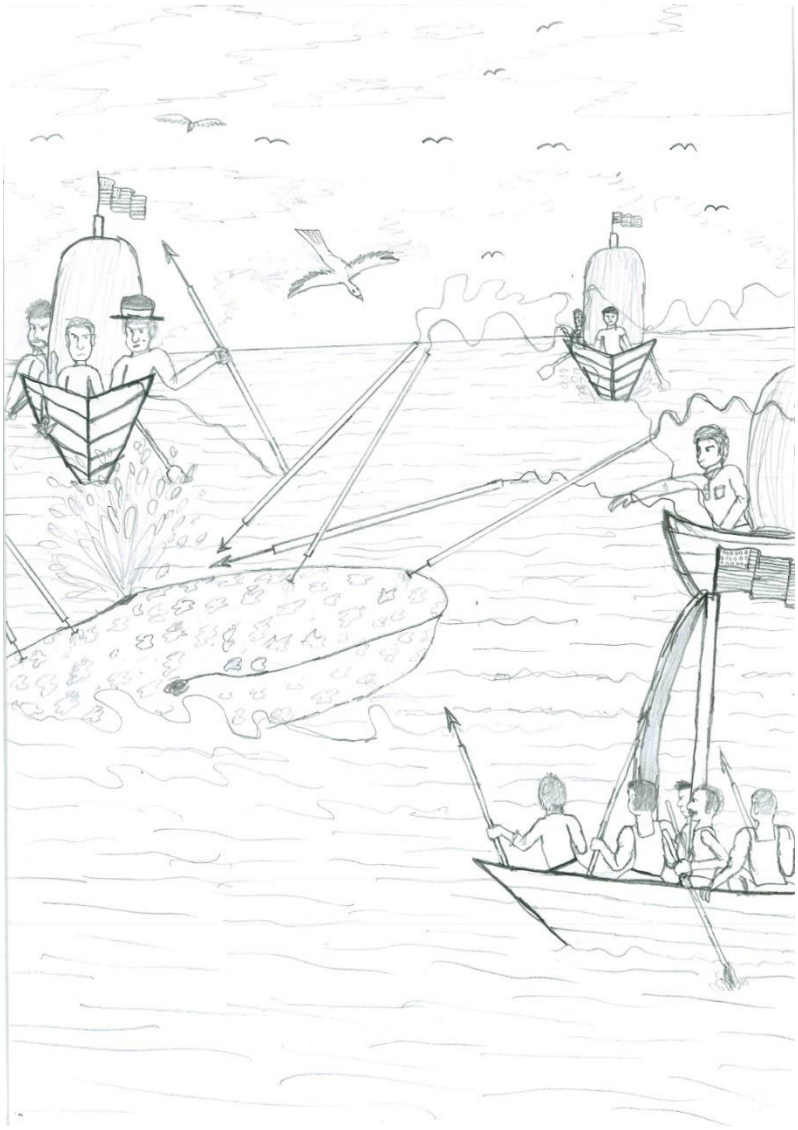
A boat chased the whale from behind. The whale noticed that the boat was approaching it. It hit the boat by its tail. The men who were in the boat screamed loudly and asked for help.

"My companions, the grey whales are not weak or easy hunts as we thought," Darnay shouted, "Kill it violently. Stab it."

The men rained the grey whale with spears. The boat which was hit by the whale sank. Its men swam and the other boats rescued them. The rest of the men continued to thrust their spears into the whale's body. Its blood spread in the water.

"I'll take a spear and fight this proud fellow in the water," Taigo said angrily.

He took a spear and jumped into the water. Taigo dived under the whale's body and stabbed its belly. Then, he swam quickly to the surface of the water. He took a deep breath. "Give me another spear," he shouted, "I stabbed its belly."



The men rained the grey whale with spears.

The men were happy and gave him another spear. They continued stabbing the whale's back and face. Taigo dived, again, into the water and stabbed it targeting the heart.

The crew members noticed that the whale started swimming slowly, but it continued spouting water. The crew was surprised and continued stabbing it. Then, they saw the whale spouting blood. They cheered happily.

"How nice! Taigo is a useful and skillful man, indeed," Darnay said, "He can kill Tylo Frip easily."

Taigo's head appeared on the surface of the water and he took a deep breath again.

"I stabbed the heart," he said, "Did it spout blood?"

"Yes, it did," the men replied, "You are very skillful."

The grey whale died after few moments. The men pulled its heavy body to the ship. Jim looked at the dead whale. The crew told him about the story of killing the grey whale. However, instead of cheering with the crew, Jim did not cheer because Tylo Frip hasn't come yet.

"That's good," Jim said to Taigo, "You could kill this whale easily in spite of its strength. It means that you can kill Tylo Frip, too, in the same way."

"Of course," Taigo said.

//////////////////////////

A week later, Robert shouted from the crow nest of Lingnerland.

"A flock of right whales," he shouted, "Hunt them."

Morgan rushed to Jim's room. He heard Jim speaking to Boxtel. He got annoyed, but he concealed his emotions. He knocked the door and entered the room.

"Sir, we saw a flock of right whales," he said, "Why don't you join us in hunting those whales?"

"No, I want to store my energy to kill Tylo Frip only," Jim replied.

"What is this?" Boxtel asked Morgan, "Jim's time is very expensive. Why do you want to hunt right whales? Their oil is less than the oil of sperm whales."

Then, Boxtel looked at Jim and began to speak against Morgan.

"I think they want to kill those whales for fun," Boxtel said with a cunning smile, "You must continue searching for Tylo Frip only."

"Yes, you are right, Boxtel," Jim said.

Then, he looked at Morgan and asked:

"Why do you want to hunt them in spite of their few oils? That is folly, isn't it?"

"Is hunting two whales not enough? Are you mad?" Boxtel asked Morgan with a wicked smile, "We have no time."

"Yes, we have no time," Jim said angrily, "Inform the men to stay on board."

"But they have already lowered the boats," Morgan said, "It will be our last whale. You must remember that the reason behind your richness is hunting four whales. We were hunting more than two. Tylo also may appear this time."

"How dare you to speak to Jim that way?" Boxtel said to Morgan to embarrass him, "Jim must fire at your empty head so that you may never speak to him in that way again."

Morgan got angry and, loudly, said to Boxtel:

"The police must know your wicked plans against Jim and hang you."

"A silly servant won't scare me at all," Boxtel said nervously, "Go away, otherwise, I'll kill you with my own hands."

"Do what you wish," Morgan said, "You will be executed soon."

"Jim, kill him," Boxtel said, "This man is unpolite. You must kill him to show him who is he and to make him a lesson for the others."

"You want to kill me because I know something about you," Morgan said to Boxtel, "Why are you instigating Jim against Tylo Frip? If Tylo kills him, you will be responsible for that."

Boxtel got furious and stood up. He grabbed a long knife from a nearby table, caught Morgan's collar and pushed him to the wall.

"If you say a word again, I'll slay you," Boxtel said nervously.

"I assure you if you kill me, you will regret it, particularly, when the police tie the rope around your neck to hang you," Morgan said quietly and without fear.

"Stop," Jim screamed loudly and looked at Boxtel, "Don't harm him, Boxtel. After all, Morgan is innocent."

Boxtel went back to his chair looking at Morgan angrily. His eyes were red and scary.

Then, Jim looked at Morgan and said quietly:

"Morgan, don't be like Rosa. Don't accuse Boxtel of instigating me against the stupid whale, Tylo Frip. It is Rosa and not Boxtel who ordered me to kill it. Don't be like Fagin. Don't try to advise me again. Don't let me treat you badly. You are my honest servant till now. Go away now."

Morgan was angry with Boxtel and walked away. He went to the deck, but the crew has lowered the boats and sailed towards the right whales.

"Boxtel is the reason behind all these problems," Morgan said to himself, "God curses him."

The crew sailed towards the right whales and attacked one of them. Five hunters and four officers threw their spears to tear up the body of one of the whales. A man stabbed its heart and killed it. Then, they pulled the dead whale to the ship. They got its oil and stored it.

The men got a great treasure. It was the whales' oil. They stored it in the downstairs below the deck. They protected the oil from decomposing by spraying it with sea water twice a week. They were doing this for two reasons: First, the salt water will make the wooden barrels close well. Second, when the men investigate the water which is pumped out of the ship, they can see if the water is mixed with oil or not. In this way, they can detect every oil leak from the barrels.

Jim was getting angrier because he couldn't find Tylo Frip till that moment. He was thinking about it throughout the day. Even he couldn't sleep well at night. Moreover, Boxtel was increasing Jim's anger. Therefore, Jim was getting weaker day by day. He stayed on bed. Doctor George came to his room and checked him up.

"I knew the reason behind your illness," George said, "You are always angry. Anger will destroy your health. You are also not eating well."

"What? No," Jim said.

"But anger will harm you," George said again, "Don't be angry because of a whale."

"Are you fool? Didn't you see what it had done to my poor son?" Jim asked George angrily, "I must take revenge."

"I am not stopping you from revenging, but don't be angry all the time," George said, "Stay calmly in your bed and you will feel better."

"No, it's swimming in my mind. I can't forget it," Jim replied.

George got annoyed from Jim's obstinacy and decided to leave Jim alone.

"Okay, do as you wish. Thank you very much. I had a good time with you," George said, "Stay calmly, don't smoke and don't drink wine. Then, you will feel better. See you later in a better condition."

George took his bag and left the room. He told Morgan how Jim behaved with him. Morgan was sorry for that.

"He's behaving strangely. He is supposed to be angry only when he faces the whale," George said, "But he mustn't pour his anger on others all the time. That's bad for his health."

Morgan stayed in his room and thought about Boxtel's rude behavior and Jim's health as well.

Chapter 11
With Other Captains

Jim's health was deteriorating. He decided to follow the doctor's advice. He stayed calmly in his room for a week. His health improved. He began to think about Tylo Frip again. He got an idea and thought that it might work well. He gathered the crew and spoke loudly.

"We hunted three whales. That's quite enough," Jim said, "We must hunt some more tuna. We hunted only one last journey because of that stupid whale."

Fagin and Sapt understood Jim's plan and looked at each other. The crew prepared sandworms. They waited till they sailed on a spot which was crowded with tuna fish. They put sandworms on hooks and threw them into the water. A tuna fish was caught after sometimes. The men killed it and pulled it to the ship. Jim waited for Tylo Frip, but it didn't come. He became angry. An hour later, the men hunted another tuna. Jim was watching the sea to see if Tylo will appear or not. Suddenly, his eyes fell on a black body that appears in the horizon. He thought that it was Tylo Frip. He took a spyglass and watched it. However, he got disappointed when he knew that the body was a ship. It was a hunting ship. Jim thought for a while and got another idea.

"There is a hunting ship in front of us," Jim said to his men, "We will meet its captain."

That ship passed by his ship. It was called Todoshima. He took a horn and shouted to its captain.

"Have you seen a brown orca whale which has three red lines on its face?" He asked loudly.

The captain asked, "Do you mean Tylo Frip?"

"Yes," Jim replied.

"Yes, we have seen it," the captain replied.

Jim was happy. He made a signal to the captain to come to his ship. The captain lowered a boat and came to Jim's ship with three men. He boarded the ship and Jim welcomed him. He took him to his room.

"Give us some drink," Jim asked Andy.

"My name is Bill," The captain said, "What do you want from me?"

"Sit down and tell me what you know about that brown orca whale," Jim replied,

"Do you want from me to tell you our story with it?" Bill asked.

"Yes, of course," Jim replied enthusiastically.

"Two weeks ago, we hunted a sperm whale," Bill said, "While we were pulling it to our ship, Tylo Frip came and stole it. It tore…"

"It always does this. Curse on it!" Jim said, "Go on."

"Tylo Frip tore the sperm whale's head. Losing the whale's oil made us very angry," Bill said.

Jim got more irritated when he heard the whale's name and what it had done to Bill's hunt.

"My officer, John, rode a boat and attacked the whale. My African hunters also did the same," Bill went on saying, "John stabbed it. Tylo became angry and as dangerous as sharks. It bit the rope and cut it to free itself. It didn't stop by this. It also jumped above the surface of the water and fell into it. This maneuver made a big wave which dashed into the men in the boat. Two of the African hunters fell into the water. Look how clever it was!"

Jim was surprised and angry. The crew was also surprised. Andy entered the room and gave Bill and his companions a drink.

"What happened next?" Jim asked.

Bill drank half of the cup and said:

"John also fell into the water. Tylo hit him into the air by its tail. Then, he fell into the water and disappeared forever."

Jim looked at the table. He remembered

Systen's death.

"It killed one of my friends in the same way," Jim said, "Sailors must find a way to deal with Tylo's tricks."

"Fighting Tylo isn't an easy task," Bill said, "Are you going to confront it?"

"Yes, of course," Jim replied.

"What? Fighting Tylo Frip? Are you in your senses?" Bill asked in surprise, "Do you realize what are you talking about?"

"I don't realize anything," Jim replied, "I want to kill it."

"It isn't possible to kill Tylo Frip," Bill added, "Do you think that it's picnic?"

"Don't try to scare me. I am not afraid of it at all," Jim said angrily, "It killed my son and I must take revenge. It also steals our hunt. We must get rid of it."

"Killing that whale is extremely difficult," Bill said, "It killed my best friends, but we don't want to avenge. Beware of the same fate. We want to be busy hunting tuna fish and more whales and not hunting Tylo Frip."

Jim was getting angry with every advice which is given to him. He said goodbye to Bill and asked him to return to his ship. Bill stood up and looked at Jim.

"Don't be arrogant. I am advising you, but you don't like the advisers," Bill said this and went to his ship.

"Didn't you hear what Tylo Frip had done to Bill's men?" Fagin asked Jim, "Will you change your mind or you will remain uncompromising?"

"Shut up, Can't you?" Jim said to Fagin angrily, "You crossed your borders."

"I advised you only," Fagin said.

"I don't need your advice," Jim said angrily, "Don't advise me again, otherwise, I'll kill you. Go away and I don't want to see you again."

Jim sat on his bed. He became more interested in Tylo Frip after hearing Bill's story.

"Tylo Frip must be near this location," Jim said angrily, "Hunt more tuna."

The crew obeyed him immediately. On that day, they hunted eight tuna fish, but Tylo didn't appear. Jim was mad with anger.

On the following day, the crew hunted seven tunas. The place where they stored the tuna's meat was full. There was no another space to store more meat. The crew discussed this problem with Jim. He gave them a bad solution.

"We can hunt tunas," Jim suggested, "After that, throw them into the sea."

There was no other way but to do as Jim said. In two days, they killed twenty tunas and threw them back to the sea. The poor tunas were only the food of the sharks. The crew got tired and exhausted.

//////////////////////////

Seven days later, a hunting ship passed by them. It was called Interquiek. Jim took the horn and shouted loudly:

"Have you seen a brown orca whale which has three red lines on its face?"

The captain of Interquiek nodded. Jim was happy and decided to make a visit to Interquiek. In less than one minute, his boat was on the water. He sailed to Interquiek with two men. The captain of the Interquiek welcomed him and gave Jim a drink.

"My name is Hawkins," the captain said, "We are sailing to New York. What is your name?"

“My name is Jim. Please tell me about the brown foolish orca whale,” Jim said.

“That thief and killer?” Hawkins asked, smilingly.

“Yes, that stupid fellow,” Jim replied, “Have you seen it during this journey?”

“Yes, we met it and fought against it,” Hawkins said, “In that battle, I lost my father and brother. How sad!”

“What? How?” Jim asked in surprise, “Tell me more about the story.”

“A month ago, we hunted a tuna,” Hawkins said, “Tylo Frip rushed to us and stole it. We….”

“Stupid whale! It does this always,” Jim said quickly, “It is a famous thief.”

“Yes, it is really a disgusting whale,” Hawkins said, “Does it do that because it is hungry?”

“I don’t know,” Jim said, “I only know that it is a naughty whale.”

Hawkins smiled and thought a little. He was surprised about Jim’s interest in Tylo Frip.

“But I don’t know why you hate Tylo that way!” Hawkins said, “You hate it so much that you visited my ship to know more about it.”

"Yes, please continue your story," Jim said.

"We were angry when it stole our hunt," Hawkins went on, "We lowered the boats and attacked it. It wasn't afraid of us. It attacked my brother's boat. In a moment, the boat was upside down. The men in my brother's boat fell into the water, but they swam and got rescued by other boats. My brother wasn't a good swimmer and began to drown. My father, who was the captain at that time, saw him drowning. He took a knife and jumped into the water to help him. Tylo was clever. It, skillfully, swam away from the sharp knife. Then, it came back to my father and attacked him. I didn't know what had happened to my father after that. Two minutes later, a body without head was hit by Tylo's tail into the air. It flew into the air and fell far away from the boats. It was my father's body. My brother disappeared in the depth of the dark ocean forever. The rest of us began to shoot it with spears. The whale was furious. It began to swim in all directions. The ropes, tied to spears, got tied with each other. The whale found itself surrounded with a net of ropes and spears. It knew that it was trapped, but it was very clever. It turned quickly around itself and pulled some ropes, bit and cut them violently. Its plan worked well and freed it from many ropes. It decided to free itself also from the spears which were thrusted into its skin. It rushed to the boats and rubbed its skin against the bodies of the boats. It broke some spears and freed itself from others. Then, it attacked our boats also. It bit a nearby boat and threw it towards my boat. All of us gasped in horror and got frozen with fear. The boat fell on our boat and the two boats broke into pieces. We fell into the water and swam as fast as we could to the ship. Our faces got yellow with fear. A sharp piece of wood injured my arm. It started bleeding. All the men were injured and some of them were suffering from the salt water which entered their lungs, stomachs and eyes. Tylo Frip thought that it won the battle and swam away proudly. The ship rescued all the alive men."

Jim was very astonished. He knew Tylo's strength and intended to change his opinion. But when he remembered Sikes' death and Boxtel's words, he decided to continue confronting the whale whatever its strength might be.

"It was really a great and awesome whale," Hawkins said, "However, it's also very dangerous."

"Why did no one try to chase it?" Jim asked.

"No, many of us got injured while confronting it as I told you before," Hawkins replied.

Then, he showed Jim his arm. There was a trace of deep injury on it.

"Although this is a trace of a month-old wound, but it still pains me," Hawkins said.

"The doctor of our ship helped us when we returned to the ship," Hawkins added, "Indeed, we were lucky to remain alive."

"What happened to Tylo Frip?" Jim raised this question because he was interested in Tylo Frip only, "Have you seen it again?"

"We saw it before two days," Hawkins replied.

"What?" Jim asked in surprise, "Did you attack it again?"

"No, do you think that losing my father and brother isn't enough?" Hawkins asked.

"How fool! You better kill it," Jim said angrily, "It troubles hunters."

"No, that is difficult," Hawkins said, "You better let it alone."

"You are coward. You must take revenge for your father and brother," Jim said.

“But if it kills me, my family will lose me forever,” Hawkins said, “I don’t want them to lose me because of a whale.”

“I also have a family, but I’ll kill it,” Jim said.

“You knew what had happened to my father and my brother,” Hawkins said, “Their death must teach you a lesson. Nothing can defeat that whale.”

“I can do that. God will help me,” Jim said.

“How will you kill it? Tell me,” Hawkins asked.

“I’ll stab its heart,” Jim replied.

“How will you arrive there?” Hawkins asked.

“I don’t know, but I’ll do my best to kill it,” Jim replied, “It killed my son and I must take revenge.”

“I fear that you won’t remember my advice except after you disappear into the ocean like my brother,” Hawkins warned, “It is an intelligent and dangerous whale. Moreover, you are not an orca whale’s hunter.”

Jim ignored his warnings and began to ask again: “Which way was it going?”

“To the north,” Hawkins replied.

“Are you sure?” Jim asked.

“Yes,” Hawkins said, “I think that you are mad."

"Yes, I am," Jim replied angrily, stood up and left the room. Then, he went back to his ship.

On the way, he was surprised and angry. He swore that he won't surrender till he kills Tylo Frip. But he didn't want to tell the crew about Hawkins' story as they may refuse to confront Tylo Frip. He ordered the two men who were with him on the boat to keep Hawkins' story as a secret.

"I'll show the other captains my strength," Jim shouted.

Jim arrived at the ship and boarded it. He ordered his men to sail to the north. They asked him to tell them what Interquiek's captain had said to him.

"Nothing. He said that they were about to kill Tylo Frip, but it withdrew and swam away," Jim said.

Jim went to Boxtel and told him Hawkins' story.

"I am worried that Tylo may kill us," Jim said, "How can we fight a whale which is clever, powerful and dangerous?"

"Don't say this, Jim," Boxtel replied, "It's only an orca whale and not more than that. It is in the size of a sperm whale and you can kill a sperm whale easily."

"I know that, but it seems to be very difficult to fight it." Jim said, "Its confrontation is not as easy as that of the sperm whales. You can make the sperm whale bleed to death, but you can't do the same to Tylo because it's clever, fast and fatal. No one can reach its heart and stab it."

"No, Jim, you are wrong," Boxtel said, "Don't listen to the men who try to discourage and scare you. I think that you have been hammered by Fagin."

"No, never. Don't think that way. I didn't listen to that stupid man," Jim said, "Actually, the Hawkins' story filled me with a sense of awe."

"You must kill that whale at any cost," Boxtel said, "It killed your son. If I were you, I would not spare its life. It seems that you are a coward man. Don't let Hawkins' story scare you. They were weak, may be. I think that they weren't having enough men to fight Tylo Frip."

"Yes, you are right," Jim said, "I'll kill it."

//////////////////////////

On the following day, the weather was cloudy and the crew thought that a storm will arrive soon. A hunting ship passed by them. It was called Kaitfodam.

"Have you seen a brown orca whale which has three red lines on its face?" Jim asked loudly as usual.

The captain of Kaitfodam nodded. Immediately, Jim lowered a boat, rowed with two men towards Kaitfodam and boarded the ship. Its captain welcomed him.

"My name is Oliver," he said, "I am sailing to New York. What is your name?"

"My name is Jim. What about Tylo…?!" Jim answered and asked simultaneously.

"Jim?! I heard about you," Oliver said, "You are a rich man I think, am I right?"

"Yes, but have you seen Tylo in your journey?" Jim asked.

"We saw it yesterday," Oliver replied.

Jim opened his eyes wide in astonishment.

"What have you done with it?" Jim asked.

"We decided to fight it after it stole our hunt," Oliver replied.

"How did you fight it?" Jim asked.

"We lowered our boats after it stole our hunt,"

Oliver replied, “We decided to teach it a lesson. When we lowered the boats, it dived into the water and disappeared. We couldn’t see it again. I think that it wasn’t having guts to fight us. It seems that it was tired. I don’t know what had happened to it.”

Jim was disappointed and angry. He wanted to know how he can fight Tylo Frip.

“Which direction was it going to?” Jim asked.

“To the north,” Oliver replied.

“No doubt that it is going to the north pole,” Jim said, guessingly.

“I don’t know,” Oliver said, “Do you want to chase it?”

“Yes, and to kill it,” Jim replied.

“Why? That whale is very dangerous,” Oliver said, “We let it swim away when it avoided fighting us. You shall also do the same with it.”

Jim got annoyed when he heard that. He hated such discouraging advices.

“I don’t care about that,” Jim said angrily, “It killed my son and I must take revenge.”

“Would you like to eat or drink something?” Oliver asked.

“No, thanks. We have no time,” Jim said, “I must find Tylo Frip."

He stood up and walked out of the room. He, with the two men, went back to the boat, rowed to Lingnerland and boarded it. The sky was full of dark clouds.

"The man who will see the whale will have this box," Jim declared.

"We will, we will," the crew cheered.

"What did that captain say to you?" A man asked, "What was his story?"

"He said that Tylo Frip escaped away after seeing them lowering the boats," Jim said with a smile, "Did you see how coward it is?! Killing it isn't difficult at all. Will you kill it?"

"We will, we will," the men shouted. Jim was happy and went to his room.

//////////////////////////

A storm began to blow fiercely. A huge wave hit the ship. It staggered violently. Some barrels of drinking water fell down and some got cracked. The water flowed all around. Fagin saw it and rushed to Jim's room. The door was open. He entered the room.

He saw Jim sitting alone on a chair and reading a map. He was studying the places where he may find Tylo Frip.

"Sir, we are in a great danger," Fagin said, "Some barrels fell down and some other got cracked and water flowed all around."

"We are near some islands now," Jim said, "I think that orca whales live there. Tylo Frip may also live in those places. That's what I see. Am I right?"

"I am speaking about the drinking water," Fagin said quietly.

"And what about them?" Jim asked angrily, "Don't you know that I am busy?"

"I know that, but the water is more important than Tylo Frip," Fagin said quietly.

"What about the water?" Jim asked, "Tell me quickly and go away."

"Due to storm, some barrels fell down and some other got cracked and water flowed all around," Fagin repeated again.

"It's a serious matter, but I didn't travel on this dark ocean to be busy with old barrels and leaking water," Jim mocked, "I don't care about that till I find my enemy and smoke it out."

Fagin got angry, but he concealed his anger.

"But the crew will suffer from shortage of water," Fagin said.

"If we suffer from shortage of water, we will drink from the sea," Jim said.

"I am speaking seriously, Sir," Fagin said.

"I am also speaking seriously," Jim said, "Go away now."

"Okay, but please give us a solution as a captain," Fagin requested.

"I have no time," Jim shouted nervously "Get out of here."

"But…" Fagin said.

"Go away, Fagin," Jim said angrily.

"No, give me a solution first," Fagin repeated with a sense of resentment.

Jim stood up staring at Fagin angrily and attacked him. He grabbed his collar and took out a pistol from his pocket.

"You know this, don't you?" Jim asked rudely.

Fagin nodded with little anger. Jim smiled angrily.

"Yes, and it's loaded," he added quietly.

"If you say a word about this matter again, I'll smash your head by one bullet," Jim warned, "If you decided to advise me, you must better think about your life first. Challenge me once more and you will see."

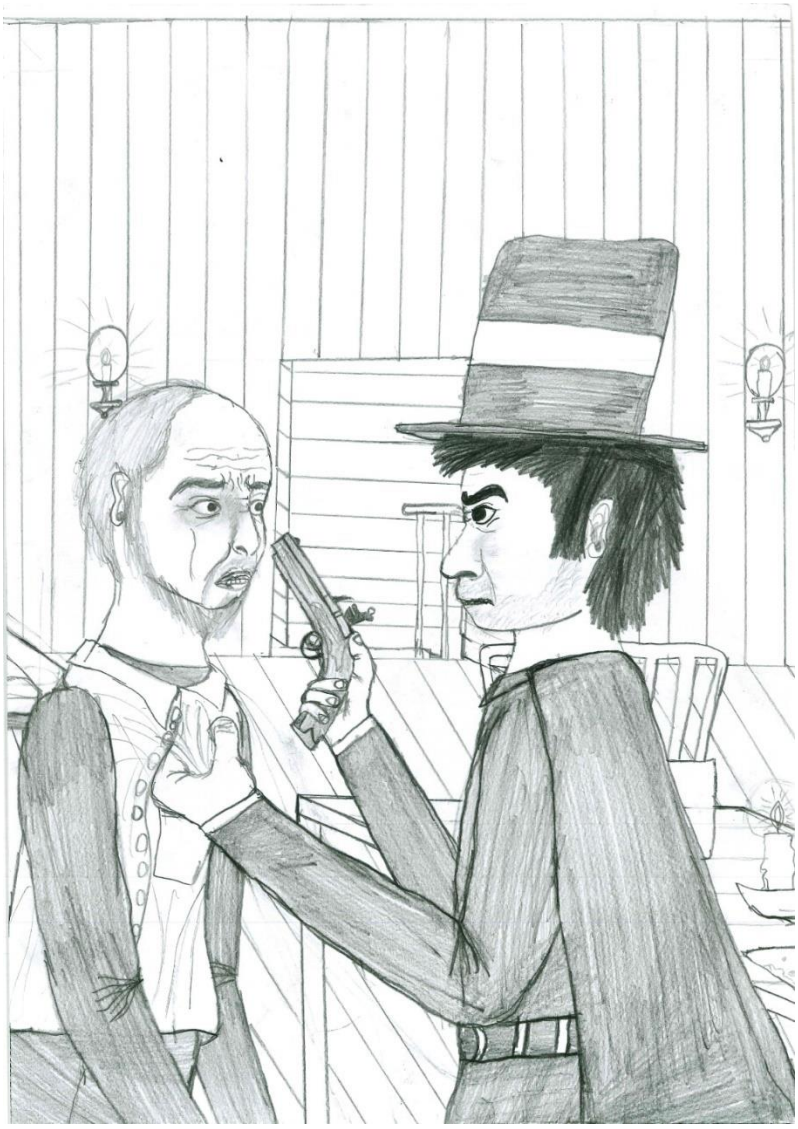
Then, Jim pushed Fagin away towards the door and said, "Get out of here."

Fagin walked slowly to the door. Jim raised his pistol at him saying, "My pistol is pointing at your back."



"You know this, don't you?" Jim asked rudely.

Suddenly, Jim fired at the wall. Fagin got scared when he heard the bang of the pistol. Jim laughed loudly.

"I tried to scare you," he said, "Get out of here. Go to the deck."

Fagin looked at Jim angrily and walked outside quickly. Jim put his pistol back to his pocket after Fagin disappeared. Suddenly, he heard a shout from outside. It was Fagin's voice.

"I'll show you, rough man," he shouted, "Beware of me. Fagin will teach you a cruel lesson."

Jim sat down looking at his map again ignoring Fagin's warnings, but his words were still ringing in his ears. He was worried because he didn't want to make a problem with a member of his crew. He went to the crew and ordered them to put the rest of the water in new barrels. He went back to his room and found Boxtel sitting there. Jim told him what he had done to Fagin. Boxtel smiled wickedly.

"How nice! You have done what I told you to do," Boxtel said.

"I didn't want to kill him," Jim said, "I wanted to sit here alone to look into my maps, but he came troubling me with the matter of the spilled water."

"Okay, I hope you succeed in killing Tylo Frip and that is the important matter," Boxtel said and left the room.

Jim sat down and continued studying his maps, prepared a plan and slept.

//////////////////////

On the following day, Jim went to the deck and looked at the beautiful sea and clear sky. He saw a body coming up and down in the horizon. He took a spyglass to see it. He was stunned when he saw it. It was the brown orca whale which has three red lines on its face. Jim was mad and screamed as loud as he could:

"Tylo Frip. It's there."

The crew rushed to see the whale. Jim was very enthusiastic.

"Let's sail towards it," Jim shouted, "Be ready to lower the boats when we approach it."

Ten minutes later, Lingnerland sailed on the spot where Tylo appeared, but the men didn't see it at all. Jim was angry. He took out his compass. He was surprised when he knew that the whale was heading towards the west.

"Is it going towards New York coast?" Jim asked himself.

He ordered the crew to sail to the west. He hoped that he can find his enemy easily.

Chapter 12
The Scary Voices

The crew was looking at the sea for two days as Jim ordered them to do so. However, there was no trace of Tylo Frip. Jim was very angry as he couldn't find it. He went to bed.

During midnight, Jim woke up because of a dream. He couldn't sleep till morning. In the morning, Jim walked to the kitchen. He saw Sapt in the kitchen drinking a cup of rum. Jim sat on a chair and ordered Achley to give him a drink.

"Good morning, Sapt," Jim said.

"Good morning, Mr. Fritz," Sapt said.

"Listen! I dreamt last night," Jim said, "I dreamt that all of the crew were lying on the deck of the ship. They were tired. Then, I saw a huge whirlpool surrounding our ship. After that, a huge body jumped above the surface of the water. It was Tylo Frip. It was wet with blood. I saw a bullet stuck in Fagin's head and there was a man without head. Then, Tylo began to swallow our ship. My right leg was cut, but I could walk. I was the only man who survived. I jumped to the water before Tylo swallows the ship completely. I dived into the water and reached the bottom of the sea. Then, I slept there. Do you know what does this dream mean?"

"I think that our end will be in the hand of Tylo Frip. That's why it swallowed the ship," Sapt said

"And what will you say about the blood which was covering its body?" Jim asked.

"I think that we will also let it bleed," Sapt said, "But I am afraid of our grim fate."

"We will kill it," Jim said quickly, "I was thinking about the bullet which has stuck in Fagin's forehead."

"I think that he may die because of a bullet shot," Sapt guessed.

"How? No one, among the crew, uses a pistol," Jim said.

"Fagin said that you were about to kill him by your pistol," Sapt said.

"I didn't want to kill him," Jim denied, "I wanted only to scare him. His advises were source of trouble to me. What about me? Why did I sleep in the bottom of the ocean?"

"I think that you will rest in peace there," Sapt said.

"How? I can swim," Jim said, "No, this isn't the meaning of this dream. The dream is saying that I'll kill Tylo Frip and cover its body with blood."

"What about the rest of the dream?" Sapt asked, "The dream is clear and don't try to go left and right. Moreover, what will you say about swallowing the ship?"

"I don't know, but I won't change my mind because of a stupid hallucination," Jim said.

"Sometimes, dreams are advisers. Bill and the other two captains told you about what happened to their men after confronting Tylo Frip," Sapt said.

"Who told you that Tylo defeated the other two captains' men?" Jim inquired.

"Do you think that Bill's story isn't enough?" Sapt asked.

"No, they were weak," Jim replied, "They didn't fight it seriously."

Suddenly, Fagin entered the kitchen to take a drink. He listened carefully to the dialogue between Jim and Sapt.

"It doesn't mean that Tylo is weak," Sapt said.

"No, don't try to think about going back to New York before burying Tylo Frip into the bottom of the ocean. It is Tylo Frip which will rest in peace." Jim said angrily.

"But, in the process, you are going to kill all of us," Sapt warned "We…"

"Do you really call yourself an officer?" Jim asked, "You are a coward."

"Mr. Fritz, Sapt is right," Fagin said, "Please, stop thinking about your mad plans. Let the…"

"Who asked you to speak?" Jim said angrily, "Take your drink and leave the kitchen. You must remember what had happened to you before yesterday."

"I want to remind you that fighting Tylo Frip isn't an easy matter," Fagin said, "Let the men return to their families safely. We have the hunt for which we came. That's quite enough. No one is ready to get involved in your revenges."

"Shut up! You stupid fellow," Jim said angrily,

“I don’t want to go back to New York because my wife hates me. Moreover, I let you hunt whales only to appease you. Hunting whales wasn’t the reason behind our current journey. Both of you must leave this place. Don’t irritate me.”

Sapt and Fagin were forced to go outside the kitchen. Jim decided to go to his room and try to think about the meaning of his dream.

He walked to his room, entered it and saw Boxtel. Jim was surprised to see him sitting there. Closing the door, Jim asked:

“How could you know that I went outside? Are you a demon?”

“If you don’t want me, I’ll leave immediately.” Boxtel said.

“No, stay here,” Jim said, “I want to speak to you about something.”

Jim told him about the dream and how Sapt has interpreted it.

“Sapt is wrong,” Boxtel said, “Swallowing the ship doesn’t mean that Tylo will kill us. It means that the men will fight it fiercely. The man who was without head will be killed by Tylo. A death of a man won’t scare us. It is not a serious matter.”

"What about my cut leg?" Jim asked worriedly.

"It doesn't mean anything," Boxtel said, "It's just like the bullet in Fagin's head. That also doesn't mean anything."

"What about lying on the bottom of the ocean?" Jim asked, "Sapt said that I would drown."

"Sapt is stupid. Doesn't he know that you can swim?" Boxtel said.

"I also told him that, but what does that mean?" Jim asked.

"It means that you will give a sigh of relief after killing Tylo Frip," Boxtel said, "Lying on the bottom of the ocean means a complete sense of relief because you don't have another place to rest except in the water."

"But why didn't I lie in the ship?" Jim asked, "Why did I lie on the bottom of the ocean?"

"Because…Tylo swallowed it," Boxtel said.

"Do you contradict yourself? Didn't you say that swallowing the ship doesn't mean anything?" Jim asked, "I think that Tylo will destroy the ship."

"I advise you not think about that stupid dream," Boxtel said, "Be sure that you will kill it. I swear! Try your best and you will succeed."

Jim believed him and spoke with him about some other different things.

Suddenly, while the crew was eating their breakfast, they heard a loud and terrible voice. They stood up and listened carefully. Again, they heard the same voice. It was louder than the horns. It was like the woman's scream, but it was even louder. Its echo was very scary. Then, the crew heard the voice for the third time. They got terrified.

"What is this?" Taisam asked worriedly, "It must be a ghost or evil spirits swimming in the water."

Jim was speaking to Boxtel at that moment, but when he heard the scary voices, he was afraid at first. When he heard the voice for the fourth time, he decided to know the source of these voices.

"Wait here, Boxtel," Jim said, "I'll go outside and know the source of these horrible voices."

He stood up and went to the deck. He looked at the crew. They were afraid. There was a thick mist covering the world around them. The voice in the mist made them very scared.

"Don't worry," Jim said, "It must be a humpback whale or a blue whale."

The men's faces turned to yellow. Jim also became worried.

"Who is the man who can swim inside the water and know what is happening around us?" Jim asked, "Who will do that?"

Sheigo decided to go there. He took a spear and jumped into the water. He dived into the water. Suddenly, the crew heard the voice again.

"What happened to Sheigo?" A man asked.

"I think that the ghost saw him and roared," Darnay replied.

A minute later, the men saw some blood on the surface of the water. Sheigo didn't appear. The crew got more horrified. Jim also got scared. He ordered the crew to change the direction of the ship. He looked at the sea. Suddenly, he saw a brown body roaming around in the water. He was shocked and closed his eyes for a second. He opened his eyes and looked at the water again, but he saw nothing. The mist was covering the world around them. Therefore, Jim couldn't see the body clearly.

"Was it Tylo Frip?" Jim asked himself.

Two minutes later, the voices stopped. The crew gave a sigh of relief.

On the following day, a hunting ship passed by them. It was called Franklen.

“Have you seen a brown orca whale which has three red lines on its face?” Jim asked, as usual, the crew of Franklen.

The captain of Franklen responded by saying, “Yes.”

He lowered a boat and came to visit Jim’s ship. Jim welcomed him and took him to a special room. Jim asked him about the whale.

“We saw it yesterday,” the captain replied, “It was making strange loud voices.”

Jim was about to be mad. He began to ask him many questions.

“How did you know that the voices belong to it?” Jim asked, “There was a thick mist.”

“It made those voices during our last journey,” the captain replied, “That’s why we knew the source of those voices.”

“Really?” Jim asked, “Why does it make frightening voices?”

“I think that I knew the reason about that,” the captain replied, “It does that to frighten sailors and force them to change the direction of their ship so that no one will fight it."

Jim was shocked and got furious. He realized that he was misled by the whale, consequently, he ordered the crew to change the direction of the ship. His eyes turned red.

"The brown body was Tylo Frip," Jim said to himself, "It really tricked me. How clever it is! It has the mind which can fool even human beings."

"What happened?" The captain asked, "Are you okay?"

"Ye... Yes," Jim replied, "It's very clever."

"Yes, but do you have an issue with it?" the captain asked.

"Yes. I want to confront it," Jim replied.

"Oh, God helps and blesses you," the captain supplicated, "But be careful, it's very dangerous."

The door of the room was closed, but the men were standing near the door to listen to the dialogue between the two captains. Suddenly, Franklen's captain opened the door and came out with Jim. Jim got angry as he saw the men standing near the door.

Franklen's captain returned to his ship. Jim thought for a while. He remembered where Tylo was going. It was going to the direction of the sun rise.

"Drive the ship to the east," Jim shouted.

"To the east?" Sapt asked, "Are you going to take us to Africa?"

"Yes, what is wrong with that?" Jim asked angrily.

"Please, Jim, let us return safely to New York," Sapt requested, "We are eager to see our families."

"I also want to see my family," Jim said, "But I must kill my son's killer first. I have to take revenge as I said many times."

"Fritz, we want to go home," Sapt said again, "Go and take revenge alone. We don't want to die with you."

"Shut up, Sapt," Jim shouted nervously.

Then, he rushed to Sapt and knocked his face. Sapt fell on the ground. He stood up and pushed Jim to the ground, but Jim didn't fall down. He was stronger than Sapt. He kicked Sapt's belly, consequently, Sapt fell down.

Then, Jim took out a pistol, pointed it at Sapt's heart and said, "If you cross your borders again, I'll burst your heart into pieces like what I will do with that of Tylo Frip."

He kicked Sapt's belly, consequently, Sapt fell down.

The men rushed to separate them from each other. Jim walked away angrily. Sapt felt a desire to vomit after Jim had hit his belly. His nose was bleeding. He stood up and went to wash his face. He went to his bed and tried to be calm.

“The brown body which I saw yesterday was Tylo Frip,” Jim said angrily to the crew, “We will kill it.”

One hour later, a flock of orca whales passed by them. Jim looked at them angrily and tried to spot Tylo Frip among them. It was occupying his mind.

“Tylo Frip might be with them,” Jim guessed to Taisam.

“No, Tylo always swims alone,” Taisam replied. “But I think that Tylo Frip isn’t far from us. Don’t lose hope. Be positive.”

“I have to kill it.” Jim screamed as loud as he could.

Chapter 13
The First Battle

George stayed with Sapt in his room for a while during that night to observe his condition. Fagin also came and visited him.

"Jim hit you badly," George said, "I think you were about to be affected by hernia because your tissues are inflamed."

"Jim is almost mad," Sapt said, "I think that you shall subject him to psychiatric checkup."

"Let him alone," George said, "Don't interfere with his affairs. If you try to stop him from doing what he wants, he may go out of his sense and kill you."

Sapt agreed. Fagin and George went to their rooms.

On the following day, Jim was standing near the timber bar of the ship. He was smoking lazily. Suddenly, he saw some waves and blood. Then, a brown head with three red lines appeared outside the surface of the water. Jim couldn't believe his eyes. He took a spyglass and looked at the object. He was happy when he knew that the body was Tylo Frip. He was mad and enthusiastic. Robert also saw it at the same time.

"Tylo Frip! I saw it first," both of them shouted at the same time, "It's there."

Jim looked up at Robert angrily.

"Who saw it First?" Jim asked.

"It's me because I am sitting at a place higher than yours," Robert said.

"You are a liar. It's me," Jim shouted, "I'll have the box of gold coins."

"My men, come and see your enemy," Jim shouted to his men, "Look at your trade destroyer."

The crew gathered there and looked at the whale which they were tired searching for. It was hunting something. Jim was eager to start a battle against it.

"Why are you standing like a rock?" Jim shouted at the crew, "Lower the boats. The man who will kill it will have the box of gold coins."

The men lowered the boats and jumped onto them like monkeys. Few men stayed on board like Sapt, Fagin, Morgan and nine men. Tylo Frip was eating a great white shark. It came to the surface to spout water and take a breath. It noticed the boats coming towards it. Jim's boat was in front of the other boats. He held his special spear. Tylo Frip hit the water with its tail to warn them and continued eating its meal.

"Hit the water and eat as you like," Jim shouted raising his special spear, "Your end is coming soon."

Tylo Frip saw them coming nearer and nearer. It dived quickly into water. Jim looked around to see Tylo Frip.

"Where is that devil?" Jim asked angrily.

Suddenly, the men heard a loud scary voice. Jim laughed loudly.

"Foolish whale!" Jim mocked, "Does it think that it will scare us?"

Morgan saw a brown body under Jim's boat.

"Mr. Fritz, Tylo is under your boat," he shouted.

Jim looked down, but he saw nothing. Suddenly, Tylo jumped in front of the boats to challenge them.

"Jump as you like," Jim shouted, "This will be your last jumping."

Tylo Frip noticed that the men aren't afraid of it. Therefore, it decided to fight them. Surprisingly, Taigo stabbed Tylo Frip with a spear.

"Stab it. The box is waiting for you," Jim shouted.

The men started to shoot Tylo enthusiastically with their spears. Darnay stabbed its face. Tylo hit Darnay's boat by its tail. The boat flew into the air and fell, upside down, into the water. This made the whale free from Darnay's spear. Darnay and the men of his boat swam hardly to come out from under the boat. Many other men shot Tylo with spears. Jim didn't join the men in killing the whale with the spear. He wanted to stab its heart only. Tylo raised its tail and hit another boat. The boat was broken into pieces.

The crew were having seventeen boats. They lost two due to the storm. They lost another during hunting the grey whale. They also lost two boats in confronting Tylo Frip. Only twelve boats were remaining to fight against Tylo. After hitting the two boats, Tylo Frip got rid of many spears which were nailed into its body.

"Shoot it with more spears," Jim screamed, "It can't fool us. Fight it as if it is a sperm whale."

The men threw more spears at Tylo so that it might not be easy for it to free itself from all of them easily. Tylo Frip got very angry and thought for a while. It may seem that the men were smart, but Tylo was smarter than them. It rotated around itself strongly and swiftly like a planet. Consequently, all the boats, even that of Jim, were being dragged by Tylo as their ropes were tied with spears that were nailed into its body. Many men felt dazed and some of them fell into the water. They shouted for help. They tried to cut the ropes to free the boats from this ferocious creature.

"Drive the ship to rescue them," Sapt shouted at the men who were in the ship.

"Poor men! They are going to die," Morgan said sadly.

"Jim is harming his crew, indeed," Fagin said, "He wants to kill them."

Tylo Frip continued rotating around itself till it made a strong whirlpool that pushed everything into the depth of the sea. Darnay was still swimming with many men to save themselves. Unfortunately, he was near the whirlpool. He tried to swim, but the whirlpool dipped him into the deep ocean and he disappeared. The men got scared and began to row away from the whale. Jim swam away with some men.

Many men felt dazed and some of them fell into the water.

Tylo Frip was happy because its plan worked well. It freed itself from tens of spears and began to attack the men.

“This whale had no mercy on us,” Robert screamed.

Tylo Frip hit Taisam by its tail. He flew very high into the air and fell into the water near a boat. Taisam’s back was paining. He could not swim any more. He felt that as if a heavy hummer had hit his back. Then, he fainted. The men on the boat pulled him up to the boat and went towards the ship.

Tylo Frip followed Jim. It bit his right leg. Jim shouted in pain. His special spear fell into the water and sank. Shomo who was riding a nearby boat stabbed Tylo Frip with all his might to save Jim. Tylo swam away and left Jim swim freely. Jim’s leg was bleeding and as the salt water entered his wound, it pained him very much. The men pulled him to the boat.

Tylo Frip thought that it won the battle and swam away proudly. All the men boarded the ship. The onboard crew got shocked as they saw Jim couldn't walk easily. He remembered his dream in which he saw his right leg was cut off.

"Sapt was right," he whispered to himself, "But I'll take revenge for my leg. I'll kill it."

"Look at what you have done to yourself," Fagin said in sorrow, "This wound is a warning for you. Tylo will kill you next time."

Jim looked at him angrily and said nothing. The men took him to his room.

"That whale is extremely dangerous. It killed Darnay," Sapt said to Fagin, "His family lost him. Poor man and poor family! I was right when I said to Jim that you are going to kill all of us."

Robert rushed to Sapt and Fagin and said:

"Come and help us. Taisam is still unconscious. The whale dealt with him as if he were a sea lion."

The crew worked hard to bring Taisam to his consciousness.

George stayed with Jim. He bandaged his wound.

"Mr. Fritz, your wound is very serious," George said, "Tylo's teeth entered deep into your flesh. Stop thinking about killing that whale. You must stay for a week till your leg recovers."

"What? Week? That's very long," Jim said, "If I see that whale, I shall not stay here for a second."

"I advised you. Do as you wish," George replied.

Then, he took his bag and left the room. Jim stayed alone in his room. He was thinking about Tylo Frip. He couldn't believe that it defeated him and it was about cut off his leg.

Suddenly, someone knocked the door and entered Jim's room. It was Fagin.

"Mr. Fritz, are you okay?" he asked, "Shall we return to New York? Look at what stubbornness has done to you. You must learn a lesson from this accident. Tylo…"

"How many times I said to you not to advise me?" Jim said angrily, "Go away. Don't come to my room again."

Fagin left the room. He was sorry for him. Sometimes later, Lucie brought to Jim some food.

"I don't want to eat now," Jim said angrily, "Who ordered you to bring food to me?"

"Morgan," Lucie replied, with fear, "He ordered me to do that because food will give you some energy."

"Take the food back. I am not hungry," Jim said, "Call Morgan."

Lucie went outside and called Morgan.

"Morgan, tell the crew to watch the sea day and night," Jim ordered.

"Okay, Sir," Morgan replied, "But why don't you eat something?"

"No, thanks," Jim replied, "I want to think of a plan which can work well and kill Tylo Frip. You can go now."

An hour later, someone knocked the door. Jim sat on the bed.

"If you are Fagin or Sapt, don't come in," Jim said.

The door was opened. It was Boxtel. He sat on a chair near the bed and, again, indulged in instigating Jim against Tylo Frip.

"Mr. Fritz, that's unbelievable. Tylo Frip defeated you so easily," Boxtel said.

“Yes, but it was strong, indeed,” Jim replied, “Sometimes it comes to my mind that I shall not fight it again.”

“Don’t give up so easily,” Boxtel said, “After all, what can a stupid orca do to a strong crew like us? Draw out a proper plan to attack it when you see it next time. It seems that you didn’t fight it seriously this time.”

Encouraged by Boxtel’s words, Jim agreed. Boxtel smiled and said: “Yes, don’t forget your son’s death. Listen! Let me join you next time and I’ll show you how to fight it fiercely.”

“You are right, Boxtel,” Jim replied, “We will fight it violently next time.”

“I’ll show you,” Boxtel said with a wicked smile.

“You are welcome to join us,” Jim replied happily.

Both of them continued speaking about Tylo Frip till the end of afternoon. Boxtel was trying to mobilize Jim’s anger against Tylo Frip.

Chapter 14
The Second Battle

Before the sunset, Jim came to the deck of the ship to walk and do some exercises to his injured leg. Fagin met him.

"Mr. Fritz, we felt bored of chasing that whale," Fagin said, "Let's sail to New York."

Jim looked at Fagin angrily. He lost his patience.

"Are you joking with me?" Jim asked, "You are such a nag man. I'll teach you an important lesson."

Jim rushed to Fagin in spite of his pain. He knocked Fagin's head with all his strength. Fagin fell down and lost one of his teeth. Some men ran and separated them from each other. They helped Fagin to stand up and requested Jim to let Fagin go.

"He always repeats what irritates me. Let him come and discourage me again and will strangulate him," Jim shouted nervously.

Jim went to his room and Morgan requested Fagin not to advise Jim again.

"No, I won't stop," Fagin said, "I'll try my best to make him put an end to this mad journey and allow us to sail to New York."

"Jim won't change his opinion," Morgan said, "He is stone-minded. He won't listen to you anymore. You will harm yourself instead of influencing him."

Fagin said nothing and went to wash his mouth. He knows that he has done what he was supposed to do.

That night, Jim was standing on the forehead of the ship. He watched the sea to see if he can spot the whale that night. All the crew was sleeping. It was two o'clock a.m. He was feeling sleepy as he had woken up early that day, but he controlled himself and tried to remain awake. He sat on the ground under the moonlight and smoked a little.

Suddenly, he heard a whale spouting water. He stared through the spyglass. He saw a whale, but it was a grey whale. He continued to stand on the forehead of the ship again waiting for the appearance of Tylo Frip, but it didn't appear.

////////////////////////////////

On the following day, the crew was eating breakfast in the cabin. Jim was eating an egg on the forehead of the ship.

Suddenly, his eyes fell on the body of Tylo Frip.

"Tylo Frip," Jim shouted, "Stop eating and lower the boats."

Jim did not eat up the whole egg, rather, he threw it into the sea. The crew rushed to the deck to see the whale appear again. They saw it hunting a grey whale. Jim was happy and enthusiastic. He rushed to the cabin as fast as he could to take a spear. On his way, he stumbled and fell down. His leg pained him. He stood up and went slowly to the cabin. He returned to the deck holding a spear with him. Boxtel passed by Jim. He was holding spear and a knife. He put the knife into his pocket.

"Fritz, it's our chance," Boxtel said.

Jim smiled and shouted at the crew:

"Lower the boats quickly." He rushed to the first lowered boat.

Fagin stood in front of him. His eyes were full of tears.

"Sir, don't kill yourself," he requested, "The whale was about to cut your leg. We don't want to lose you. You are our captain. You have a family waiting for you. Forget about that whale."

Jim pushed Fagin to the ground angrily. Then, he rode a boat and touched his ship quietly.

"Goodbye, my dear Lingnerland," Jim said, "I'll return to you after I stab Tylo Frip's heart. Stay patiently and see how we will let it spout blood."

Morgan saw Boxtel riding a boat. He smiled as he knew that he was going to meet his doom. He heard him saying to Jim: "Fritz, I'll ride my boat near the whale. I'll try to jump on its face and put the spear into its blowhole so as to stop its breathing."

"Great idea," Jim said happily.

"Boxtel will never return to the ship," Morgan said to himself with a relaxing smile.

Tylo Frip noticed them, but it was busy fighting the grey whale. It attacked the grey whale and hit it, with its hard head, on its belly. The grey whale also was fighting to defend itself. Tylo Frip decided to sink the grey whale into the water. It Jumped above the water and fell on it.

"Jump again for your last time," Jim shouted.

When the crew saw Tylo Frip, they got afraid. They remembered what had happened to them during the first battle. Tylo Frip came to the surface to breath the air. They saw many spears and ropes were still fixed on its body. They saw the remaining of Darnay's body still stuck between the ropes. The crew got horrified.

"Darnay's body mustn't scare you," Jim said, "Don't be silly."

Fagin, who was on board, saw Darnay's body.

"That is Darnay's remains, isn't it?" Fagin shouted to Jim warning him, "You will face the same fate."

Jim ignored him and ordered the crew to attack Tylo Frip.

Tylo Frip jumped high and fell on the grey whale's body. Suddenly, a sharp thing penetrated its skin. It was Jim's spear. The whale got furious. The men on Jim's boat pulled the rope of Jim's spear. Tylo Frip started to swim away quickly. It pulled Jim's boat behind it and dragged it far away from other boats. The boats tried to approach Tylo Frip and rain it with spears, but they couldn't. Jim had no choice but to take a knife and cut the rope to separate it from his boat. Then, he ordered his men to return to the other boats. The grey whale exploited the circumstance and escaped away. Therefore, Tylo Frip got angry and attacked Jim's boat as it considered it a reason behind losing its prey. It tossed the boat with its hard head. The boat flew high into the air, fell into the water and sank. Jim swam with his men to ride the other boats. His leg was paining very much, but he tried to swim as fast as he could before the whale kills him.

Tylo Frip decided to teach them a lesson. It attacked a man and swallowed him. It attacked Malgo and tore his chest. The other boats rained Tylo Frip with spears. Lots of blood came out from its body. Jim and the rest of the men rode the boats. Jim's face turned red with anger.

"Anger is running in my blood," Jim shouted nervously, "Attack it."

Boxtel's boat came near Jim's boat.

"Fritz, let me show you how I will deal with it," Boxtel said. Then, he ordered his men to row towards Tylo Frip.

When the boat came near Tylo Frip, Boxtel held his spear tightly and jumped bravely from the boat before Tylo Frip notices him. Unfortunately, he didn't descend on its face as he hoped, but on its back. He tried to creep till he arrives the face, but the whale was moving quickly. Boxtel held the dorsal fin with a hand, raised his spear with the other hand and stabbed it. He removed the spear and stabbed it again. The spear was entering deep into its flesh. Blood came out from its body and flowed into the water. The whale's pain was unbearable. It got enraged, jumped very high and rotated around itself. It did all that to free itself from this spider clinging to its back, but Boxtel caught the dorsal fin strongly. Suddenly, the spear fell from his hand. He took out his long knife and stabbed it again and again. Tylo Frip thought of an idea to get rid of Boxtel. It took a long breath and dived deep into the water. A minute later, Boxtel got suffocated, decided to leave Tylo Frip and swim up to the surface. But Tylo Frip forbade him from surfacing up and pulled him deeply into the ocean.

Boxtel held the dorsal fin with a hand, raised his spear with the other hand and stabbed it.

Jim was waiting for Boxtel to surface. Five minutes later, Tylo Frip hit a body with its tail. The body flew high above the surface of the sea. Jim looked at the body carefully in surprise.

“What? Boxtel?! Is that you Boxtel? Is that really you?” Jim asked in surprise.

Then, Tylo Frip bit Boxtel and cut him into two parts. Morgan witnessed that gruesome scene from the ship. However, he was very happy and he gave a sigh of relief whereas Jim was very furious.

“Don’t do as Boxtel did,” Jim warned his men, “Attack.”

The men stabbed Tylo with many spears. Its pain was horrible. In fact, a man felt pity for the whale.

“Why do we want to kill it?” he asked, “It’s just a type of dolphins and it is doing what whales usually do.”

Jim got annoyed by what that man had said and instigated the men against Tylo.

“Stop thinking about being kind to it and kill it. Remember that this whale is trade destroyer,” Jim said, “Attack it and let its body bleed out whole its blood.”

Taigo, Taisam and Shomo shot Tylo with spears. The rest of the men also rained it with more spears. Tylo Frip tried to free itself again. It began to rotate around itself madly. It made, this time, a bigger whirlpool. Jim was angry when he saw it starting to rotate around itself. He knew that the men will, definitely, surrender if it continues to do that as they can't stop it. The boats began to rotate around Tylo, like clock pointers. By doing so, the whale freed itself from many spears, nevertheless, it continued to maintain that whirlpool.

"Cut the ropes." Jim shouted. The men cut them with difficulty.

Many men fell into the water. Five of them were drowned by the whirlpool. Tylo Frip got tired and stopped making the whirlpool. It attacked Robert's boat, bit it and broke it into two parts. The men fell into the water. Tylo Frip attacked two more boats. The men on the two boats rained it with spears. The spears thrusted deep into its skin. Tylo Frip turned sharply and quickly around itself. The two boats dashed against each other and got cracked. Tylo Frip tossed the two boats with its head and overturned them. The men shouted for help. Tylo attacked another boat and hit the water near it to create waves that overwhelmed the boat. Lots of water entered into the boat and the men got afraid as they knew that the boat would sink. The whale dived into the water, tossed the boat from bellow and overturned it. The men who were on it were dead with fear. They swam to the direction of the ship. The whale began to kill them one by one. It cut a man's head and tore another one. It swallowed two men. Then, it attacked six men and killed them all. The rest of the men were terrified. Lingnerland rushed to save them. Tylo Frip thought that it won the battle. It stopped fighting and swam away.

"Use the remaining six boats and continue chasing it," Jim shouted, "That weak whale is escaping, but death is running after it. Don't you want the box of gold coins?"

The men were tired and afraid, but they have to respond to Jim's alluring offer. However, when the whale saw them pursuing it, it swam so fast that the boats couldn't reach it.

"Fritz, don't chase that whale unless and until it chases you," Sapt shouted from the ship, "Didn't you see what it had done with your men? Come back here. That's enough. Don't kill your men."

The men were tired and requested Jim to let them return to the ship. Jim was also tired. Moreover, his leg was paining. Therefore, he agreed to return to the ship. Nevertheless, he was very disappointed. He boarded the ship and looked back at the sea. He was wrathful to see Tylo Frip disappear.

"I will never spare its life even if it goes towards the north pole or Africa," Jim insisted.

"Are you going to kill all of us?" Fagin asked angrily, "You killed many men. You shall not chase it again. You fought it twice, but you could not kill it. I assure you that if you fight it again and again, you will never kill it. You must let it alone. That whale warned you. It will smoke you out next time."

Jim gave a great cry of anger and rushed to attack Fagin, but the men stopped him.

"I am not going to listen to your words," Jim shouted nervously, "You won't stop me at all. Tylo Frip will be the food of the sharks. Go away and I don't want to see your ugly wrinkled face again. I swear that I'll kill you next time if you try to stop me again." He cursed Fagin and walked away to his room. He forgot that he was speaking to an officer.

He entered his room and rested for sometimes. He knew that Fagin was saying the truth, but Boxtel's instigations were still pushing him to go after the whale. He felt lonely without Boxtel. Therefore, he started thinking about a plan to kill Tylo Frip and take revenge for Sikes and Boxtel.

"Aha! I had an idea. Let me try it next time," Jim said with a cunning smile, "I'll use something different."

He walked to his table, opened a desk and took out a pistol.

"I'll load it and fight it…" Jim said to himself.

Suddenly, his leg pained him. It was inflamed. He looked at it and massaged it.

"I'll also take revenge for my leg," he said to himself, "It isn't the end. I'll tear its body next time. I'll fight it with a spear and my dear pistol. This pistol also wants to take revenge for my son. Don't be sad, my dear pistol. We will both kill it."

Chapter 15
The Third Battle

On the following day, three men, who were standing in the crow's nest, saw Tylo Frip and began to shout: "Tylo Frip! It's there."

Jim's face turned red when he saw Tylo Frip. He looked at it angrily and said: "I'll meet you soon and I won't spare your life this time. No way for you to escape from me."

Then, he took out his pistol, fired at the sky and shouted as loud as he could: "Lower the boats quickly."

The sky was cloudy. The wind was blowing, but it wasn't strong. Jim rode, as usual, the first lowered boat and rushed towards Tylo Frip. The boat was being tossed by waved. It was sailing up and down.

"Waves won't stop us," Jim said, "Hit us as you like, but we will kill Tylo Frip."

The men rode other boats and followed Jim's boat. The events of yesterday's fierce battle started haunting them. A sensation of shudder went through the veins of their blood.

At then, Tylo Frip was eating a baby sperm whale. It noticed them; the same ship and the same antagonistic crew. It got very angry and started attacking them immediately. It raised its tail high, hit Shomo's boat and broke it into pieces. The men sank into the water and came out to the surface again. They swam into different directions. The other boats rescued them.

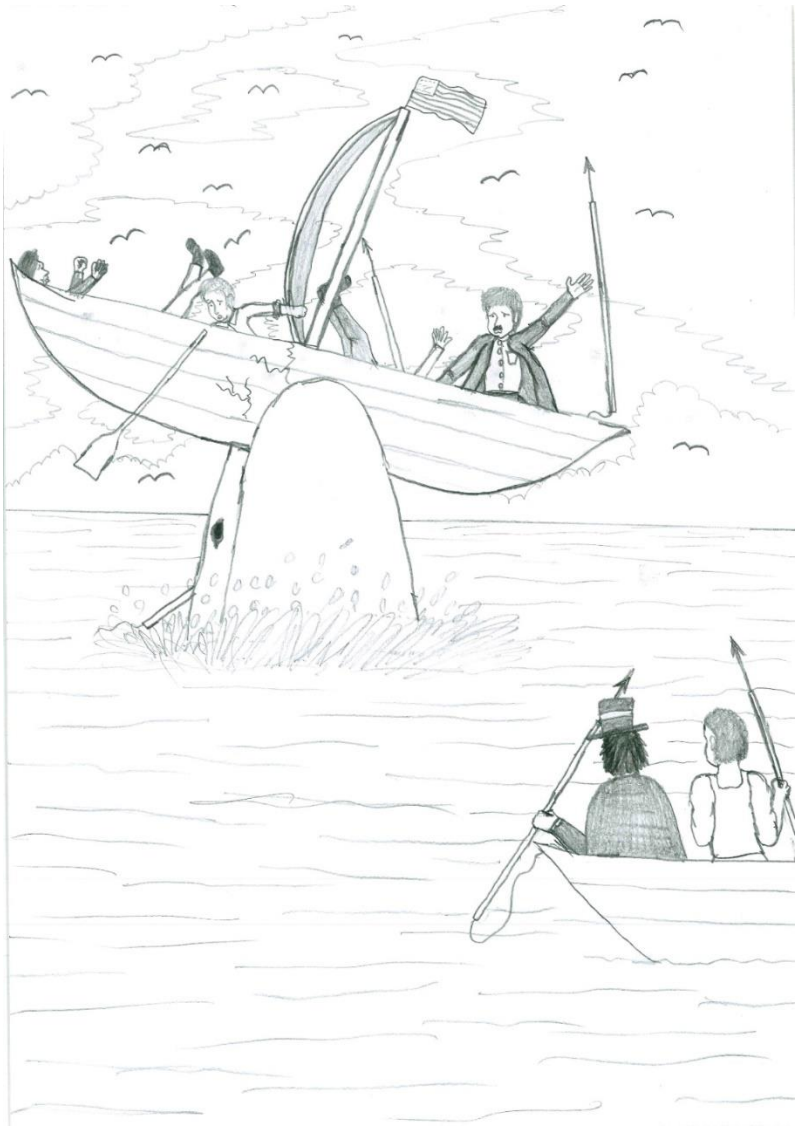
"Throw more spears," Jim shouted, "Fight it as if it is a sperm whale. Stab its eyes and blind them."

Robert ordered his men to row towards the whale's head. Tylo Frip saw them coming towards its face. It dived quickly into the water and disappeared for sometimes. Suddenly, the whale bit the boat from bellow and broke it. The water gushed into the boat. Few minutes later, the boat sank. Then, the whale attacked the men as usual. It swallowed two and killed another. It coloured the water with their blood. It cut a man's hands. Jim took out his pistol and fired at the whale's back. It got wounded. It staggered in pain. Therefore, it stopped attacking and killing the men.



Suddenly, the whale bit the boat from bellow and broke it.

It decided to swim away because it couldn't endure the pain. The men got a chance to swim and ride other boats.

"Tylo Frip is coward," Jim claimed happily, "All the captains were afraid because they thought that it was strong. We are killing it now. Continue attacking it."

Jim followed Tylo and fired at its back again. The whale was surprised. The men also reached it and stabbed it with spears. Tylo Frip was mad with anger. It decided to die with dignity instead of dying with humiliation. Tylo Frip swam near Jim's boat. Jim put his pistol in his pocket, raised his spear, cursed Tylo and stabbed it with all his strength. Tylo Frip hit the boat and overturned it in a moment. Jim swam with his men towards other boats. Tylo Frip came to the surface to take a breath. At that moment, it saw the ship and looked at it carefully. It realized that it is the ship which has been fighting it for two days. It is behind its suffering. Therefore, it swam swiftly towards the ship. Jim immediately understood Tylo Frip's plan to destroy the ship. He madly screamed: "Young dogs, pull the ropes to stop Tylo Frip."

The men pulled the ropes, but the whale

continued to rush, strongly, towards the ship till it succeeded in cutting the ropes. Jim and the men also got scared.

"My men, stop that clumsy whale," Jim shouted, "Don't you want to defend your Lingnerland? Don't you want the box of gold coins?"

The men who were in the ship got horrified. They began to pray to God to protect them. Fagin was sitting on the timber bar of the ship.

"Oh, Jim, stupid man," Fagin shouted angrily, "Look at what you brought to us. Many times, I advised you to halt your madness, but you didn't listen to me. You hit me twice. The whale is going to kill all of us. May God kill you."

Jim became very furious. He couldn't endure any blaming from anybody. He took out his pistol and fired at Fagin's head. Fagin's dead body fell and got hanged among the ropes which tie the boats to the ship. He got stuck there.

Chapter 16
Sinking of the Ship

The men who were in the ship got shocked. Sapt looked down at the dead body.

"What have you done, Jim?" He asked in surprise, "Did you kill him because he only cursed you? The police…"

Suddenly, the ship staggered strongly. Tylo Frip tossed it, with all its might, with its strong hard head. The men fell on the ground. They were horrified.

"Oh, no. This's our end I think," A man cried, "All of us will die. We won't survive."

The bottom of the ship was widely opened. Lots of water gushed into Lingnerland. First, the water entered the kitchen and overwhelmed the cookers. They screamed in fear. Then, the ship started sinking gradually.

Jim got shocked. Tylo Frip swam few yards away from them and stayed calmly as if it knew that its problems will be over after destroying Lingnerland. Jim looked at his enemy angrily.

Suddenly, he remembered his dream. He was about to faint. Everything he had seen in his dream came true in the third battle. He remembered, how, in his dream, Tylo Frip swallowed the ship, but now it destroyed it. He remembered that he saw, in his dream, his right leg was cut, but it's now about to be cut. He also remembered that he saw, in his dream, the bullet which was sticking in Fagin's head and now a bullet is inside Fagin's head. He understood that Sapt was saying the truth and Boxtel was a devil instigator. He knew that Morgan was right when he accused Boxtel of instigating him against Tylo Frip.

Jim's boat came near the destroyed ship. The men of the boat wanted to rescue the people who were in the ship. Jim's boat was near the spot where Fagin has fallen and got hanged between the ropes. He saw his body. The bullet had pierced his forehead. Jim stared at Fagin dead body while Fagin's open eyes were staring at Jim directly. Jim got scared. He couldn't believe that his dream came true. He looked at his pistol and threw it angrily into the sea. Then, he took his spear and spoke rudely to his men.

"If anyone wants to escape from this boat, I'll stab him by this spear," Jim said.

Some men who were in the ship were taken into the boat. The other two boats also helped the swimming men, but George, the six cookers and other five men had drowned.

Half of the ship was under the surface of the water. Jim looked at Lingnerland sadly.

“Oh, my dear Lingnerland,” he said in sorrow, “Why do you want to leave us and disappear into the depth of the ocean? You will stay in the bottom of the ocean forever, but I won’t forget your destroyer. Tylo Frip won’t escape from great Jim Fritz. I think that it didn’t know who I am till now.”

Angrily, Jim looked at Tylo Frip. It was roaming around.

“Do you think that we surrendered after you destroyed our ship?” he asked angrily, “Attack. Throw your spears at it.”

The men of the other boats were very surprised by Jim’s guts for further fighting with Tylo Frip. However, they were tired and no one was ready to fight that clever whale.

“What’s this? What do you want us to do?” a man asked Jim angrily, “That’s folly. That whale will kill us if we attack it again. Look how cruel it is! It killed many of us and destroyed Lingnerland. Didn't you understand till now how dangerous it is? Let's sail away and find an island to rest on instead of fighting it."

"Shut up. All of us will die in this ocean sooner or later," Jim said angrily, "Let's die with dignity. I say to you attack it."

"Who told you that we will definitely die in this ocean?" a man asked, "We may survive and find an island. A ship may also pass by us and pick us up."

"You stupid men, don't you know that my orders must be carried out strictly?" Jim asked angrily, "Attack the whale."

The boats moved towards Tylo Frip. It noticed that the boats are coming towards it. It thought for a while and discovered that when Jim shouts, the boats attack it. Now, it realized that not only Lingnerland was behind its suffering, but also Jim. Therefore, it rushed towards Jim's boat to finish the game. Jim realized that the whale is targeting him. He decided to fight it courageously. He shot his spear at the whale and stabbed it. It got enraged and rushed impulsively to kill him. The men of Jim's boat shuddered with fear when they saw the whale heading towards them.

"Jim, please, cut the rope before it gets angrier," a man requested.

"Never," Jim refused angrily. Then, he took another spear.

The men of Jim's boat got scared as they realized that the whale would kill them. They shouted for help. The two other boats wanted to save their friends. They rained the whale with spears. Tylo Frip got angrier. It decided to get rid of the two boats first, then, it can fight Jim's boat easily. When it rushed quickly towards Sapt's boat, the men began to shoot it with all their spears. The whale was moving fast. Consequently, Sapt got surrounded by nets of ropes. A noose of the rope turned around Sapt's neck, strangulated and killed him. He fell into the water. Jim was astonished. Tylo Frip hit Sapt's boat by its tail. The boat turned upside down. The men fell into the water and the whale killed them. Then, it rushed towards Robert's boat.

"Please, Tylo Frip, have mercy on us," Robert said in fear, "Jim, you are behind our suffering. Our families will lose us because of you only. Why did you tell us that Tylo Frip is a weak whale?"

Robert and his men decided to defend themselves against Tylo Frip. They shot it with many spears. Tylo Frip's body was bleeding. It jumped high, raised the boat into the air and freed itself from the spears. Robert and his men fell into the water. The boat landed upside down and sank. Tylo Frip started killing the men. Then, it looked at Jim's boat. Now, nothing will stop it from facing the last boat which carries the cause of its suffering.

Suddenly, the image of Fagin's face appeared in front of Jim. He got scared and shuddered with fear. One of the men of his boat saw him in this condition.

"What's the matter with you?" the man asked Jim in surprise, "Did Tylo Frip's bravery scare you?"

"No, it is Fagin's spirit," Jim replied with fear, "And nothing else."

Tylo Frip, angrily, headed towards the last boat. The men realized its intention and were terrified.

"Fritz, let's try to escape and find a safe haven. We will die if we attack it," Shomo said.

It jumped high, raised the boat into the air and freed itself from the spears.

Jim thought a little. As he killed, Fagin, he knows that he will be prosecuted in New York.

"I want to tell the men to keep Fagin's murder as a secret, but I am sure that they won't do so," Jim said to himself. He pondered, "They will tell people and people will inform the police. Then, I'll be convicted. I don't want to be humiliated in front of the people. I must kill my men by making them fight the whale."

"No, no, no," Jim refused angrily, "It's going to kill us sooner or later. Therefore, it is better to attack it."

Jim took a spear and shot it towards the whale. The men were forced also to defend themselves. Before they shoot it with their spears, Tylo Frip created a huge wave. The wave hit the boat. It staggered and the men fell into the water. Jim lay down quickly in the bottom of the boat to avoid falling into the sea. Tylo Frip attacked the men and killed them. Taigo swam near Jim's boat and shouted: "Help, help. Oh, Fritz, help me. Tylo Frip will kill me."

Jim decided to help Taigo as he knows that he's a useful man and he may help him in killing Tylo Frip.

"Yes, I'll save you," Jim said, "Give me your hand and I'll pull you up." Taigo swam towards him.

Suddenly, Tylo Frip jumped above the surface of the water and fell on Taigo's body. It pulled him deep into the water and tore him into pieces.

Jim was exhausted, but he held his spear and prepared himself to fight it. Suddenly, the face of Fagin appeared in front of Jim again.

"You will come with me soon!" the image of the face said to Jim who got scared and walked backwards on the boat. His leg also pained him.

"No pain again," the image of Fagin's face said to Jim who started thinking about the correlation between the pain of his leg and what the image of Fagin's face said to him. He got scared as he realized that he may die soon.

"No, I won't die," Jim said, "I'll remain alive till I kill it." Then, he looked at Tylo Frip angrily and said: "Now, I am alone. You killed my men, but I won't surrender. I hate you. I am ready to fight you with this spear and my knife. You can tear me up, but I'll continue chasing you in the world of the dead. Curse upon you!"

Then, he spat in the direction of the whale. Tylo

Frip rushed to kill him. Before Jim stabs it, the whale dived into the water, bit the boat from bellow and pulled it into the water. In a second, the boat was full of water and sank.

Jim swam and surfaced up. He saw the whale swimming around him. He approached it and stabbed its back.

"I'll kill you today," Jim shouted nervously, "I swear!" Then, he swam away quickly and left the spear fixed on its back.

Tylo Frip dived into the water swiftly. It wanted to make a surprising attack on Jim. After a while, Tylo Frip's face appeared in front of Jim. He took out his knife and stabbed its face. The whale swam away from him, but it didn't surrender. It attacked Jim from behind, but Jim was alert and stabbed its face again. The whale maneuvered and attacked him for the third time. Jim dived into the water quickly and became under the whale's belly. He raised his knife and scratched its belly, but could not stab it. The whale escaped away. It knew that it can't kill this man while he is holding the knife, but when the strength fails, the mind works. Jim came to the surface and sighed loudly. Then, he laughed.

"I can't believe that I am defeating it," Jim said, happily "I'll definitely kill it. The men were coward and thought that it is strong."

Jim looked around to search for a near-by island. He saw a something swimming far away from him between the waves, but he couldn't know what it was. He got puzzled. Then, he looked around to see Tylo Frip.

"Where is that coward whale?" he asked angrily, "It seems that it escaped away after I defeated it. It will be very bad if I do not kill it."

Suddenly, Tylo Frip bit his right leg and dragged him into the water. Jim screamed in pain and his knife fell from his hand. He was stunned because of this sudden attack. He got suffocated and tried to swim up to the surface of the water, but Tylo Frip pushed him into the depth of water. Jim began to faint.

"You will come with me in less than one minute," the voice of Fagin whispered into his ears.

Jim's lungs and stomach were full of salt water. The salt water also entered deep into his eyes. He remembered all the advices which had been given to him, but he ignored all of them and now he is seeing his own end.

"I wish that I listened to them," Jim whispered to himself, but it was too late. Then, again he heard the voice of Fagin saying to him:

"Next moment! Goodbye," Then, Jim was dead.

Tylo Frip swam happily to the surface after it tore Jim into pieces. It began to spout water and took a deep breath. It dived into the water and jumped very high despite it was injured badly.

Chapter 17
Morgan's Survival

Everything which caused pain and suffering to Tylo Frip had been dipped into the water. Then, it stayed calmly for sometimes. It must take rest now and eat very well, during the next few days, to heal his wounds and replace the lost blood.

Meanwhile, a piece of wood was floating on the water far away from Tylo Frip. It was three meters long. A man was swimming towards that wood. He was trying to hold the wood and ride on it. This man was Morgan. He was very worried and tried to swim towards the wood as fast as he could. He gave a sigh of relief after he caught it and rode on it.

The orca whales can hear as good as the cats. Tylo Frip got alert when it felt that there is a body moving in water a kilometer far away from it. The whale made cracklings to the direction of the body. Orca whales usually do that to locate their preys. The cracklings dashed against Morgan and their echo returned to Tylo's ears. It discovered that the body was of human being and it located its position, too. It got very furious and rushed to attack him. It swam with the speed of fifty-five kilometers an hour and reached the floating wood.

Morgan saw Tylo Frip and shuddered with fear. He closed his eyes and started to think about what will happen to him next. Though he was having a knife, but he didn't dare to use it. He kept it with him to use it at the most dangerous moments. The whale looked at him carefully. It tried to remember the faces of the men who fought it. This face wasn't among them. It realized that the men whom it had eaten have satisfied its hunger. Therefore, it would have no meaning to kill this one. It disappeared into the water. Morgan sighed loudly and became very happy when he saw the whale disappear into the water. He couldn't believe that he has survived.

Sharks were swimming everywhere around him. They smelled the blood of humans and Tylo Frip, but they can't even come near Tylo. They began to swim around the floating wood. They looked at Morgan with their wicked eyes. He crept to the middle of the floating wood and took out his sharp long knife.

Suddenly, a big white shark bit Morgan's floating wood. He was stunned and stabbed the shark's head quickly with all his might. The knife penetrated the brain of the shark and killed it. When other sharks smelled the blood of the dead shark, Morgan's problems increased. They began to swim around his floating wood again. He thought that it's better to row away by his hand, but it will be dangerous if a shark bites his hand while he is rowing. He stayed patiently and let the current of the sea drive his wood and carry it away.

Sometimes later, Morgan noticed that the sharks had disappeared. He put his knife into his pocket. Suddenly, he heard a spouting of a whale. He looked behind and saw Tylo Frip swimming up and down the surface of the water. Morgan kept watching it and took out his knife.

"It isn't bad when Tylo swims arround me," Morgan said to himself, "Sharks won't attack me if Tylo continues to swim near me."

Tylo Frip kept following Morgan's floating wood. Morgan was surprised and didn't understand the reason behind the behavior of the whale.

Morgan was exhausted. He surrendered to a deep sleeping. He was lying on the wood. He dreamt that he was at home. He saw that he went with Jim to the market to help him in his business.

Tylo Frip followed him quietly. The waves carried his wood to the direction of the coast of North America.

Some water fell on Morgan's face. It began to rain. The rain was very cold. Morgan woke up and looked at the sky. He imagined that he was at Fritz's home resting near the chimney's fire. Then, he looked around. He was surprised to see Tylo Frip still swimming near the floating wood.

Morgan kept watching it and took out his knife.

Sometimes later, Morgan saw a black body far away in the horizon. He stared at it carefully. Five minutes later, Morgan noticed that the black body appeared to be a ship. He was very happy. He couldn't believe that he will be saved soon. He looked at the ship happily and enthusiastically. He looked also at great Tylo Frip which seems to be gaurding him along his journey.

The ship came nearer and nearer. Morgan began to read the name of the ship. He read the word 'Todoshima' written on its forehead.

"Todoshima?" Morgan asked himself, "This isn't a strange name. I saw this ship before."

Finally, the ship passed by him. A sailor saw Morgan standing on a floating wood, raising his hands and shouting for help. The men of Todoshima lowered a boat and rowed towards Morgan. They took him into their boat. They wondered to see Tylo Frip was swimming near the floating wood. When Tylo Frip saw the boat, it dived quickly into the water. The sailors headed towards their ship. Meanwhile, they asked Morgan many questions.

"Let's board the ship and I'll tell you the whole story," Morgan replied.

Tylo Frip headed towards the north pole. Morgan was surprised when he knew that the ship belongs to Bill. His ship was returning to New York after hunting lots of tuna, a sperm whale and a grey whale. Bill welcomed Morgan and listened to his long story.

"Jim is an arrogant man," Bill said, "I told him about my battle against the whale and advised him not to confront it, but he put mud into his ears. He didn't listen to me at all. He was a stupid man, indeed. Why did he devote his whole journey to fight a whale? Has he forgotten that this whale is very clever and dangerous?"

"Yes, you are right, Bill," Morgan added, "He killed all the men because of his son only. There was a man who called Boxtel. He continuously instigated Jim to kill that whale. I advised Jim not to listen to Boxtel, but all went in vain. Even Boxtel threatened to kill me."

"The battles against the whale were violent, indeed," Bill said, "I have never seen fierce battles like those before. They were sufficient signs to make Jim surrender and leave the whale to its own. But he didn't."

"Jim became a very bad-tempered man," Morgan added, "He didn't listen to anyone; even he threw his crew's advices to the wind. He went to the extent of killing Fagin just because he advised him."

"How strange!" Bill said, "I can't believe that Jim is a murderer. He turned to be a criminal."

"Yes, I think because of that Jim didn't desire to go back to New York as he would be convicted," Morgan said, "I realized that Tylo Frip is a clever whale and an exceptional fighter. Therefore, I stayed on the ship and never departed it to fight Tylo Frip. If I had been one of those who fought it, I would haven't been alive now. My wisdom saved my life."

Then, Morgan went to a room and slept peacefully. Bill was interested in Morgan's story. He continued to listen to the details of the story till they arrived at New York.

Chapter 18
Returning to New York

Two months later, Todoshima arrived at New York. Morgan looked at the beach. He hasn't seen this place for a long time and he was not expecting to see it again. It was just a dream for him. He went to the port and told the officers at the customs of the port about his story. They were very much surprised.

"If Jim returned to New York, the police would execute him, but the whale has already done the job. Nature, sometime, carries out justice," an officer in the port said.

"This's strange," another officer said, "That whale is hampering trade. We must kill it. Where was it heading to?"

"What? Killing Tylo Frip?" Morgan asked in surprise, "Didn't you learn a lesson from Jim's fate?"

"Don't worry," the officer replied, "We will send four warships to fight it. Just tell us, to which direction was it heading?"

"Towards the north pole, I think," Morgan replied, “It isn’t easy to find it there. First, the north pole is very cold. Second, it will be difficult to find it there among those floating mountains of ice.”

“We will try our best to find it,” the officer said, “We are sure that we will find it easily because of the peculiar color of its body.”

“We must kill it,” the other officer said, “A month ago, a ship which is called Retaldiom arrived. Its sailors came back without whales. Its captain; Tom, told us the reason behind losing their hunt. The reason was Tylo Frip only. It’s really a thief. The whale kept troubling them all the way to the shores of New York city.”

“Do as you wish, but be very careful. It is a horrible whale,” Morgan warned.

“We know how to deal with it. Don’t worry,” the officer said.

Morgan nodded and left the place. He went to Jim’s house. He knocked the door and Rosa opened it. She was astonished to see Morgan returning. However, Morgan was sad.

“Morgan?!” She asked in surprise, “And…where is Jim?”

“Do you want him to return after you sent him to a killer whale?" Morgan asked in a sad voice.

Rosa got shocked to hear this. She looked at Morgan with puzzled eyes.

Morgan went to his room and Rosa followed him. He sat on a chair, drank some water and told her the long story. The children were listening at the story curiously. Rosa screamed loudly and almost collapsed.

"Why are you screaming that way?" Morgan asked, "You are behind the death of your husband and your son, as well."

"How dare you? Are you aware of what you are saying?" Rosa asked angrily.

"Yes, I am," Morgan replied calmly, "I will tell you the truth. You also accused your husband of murder. Your stupid mission to kill the whale made Jim shoot and kill an innocent man and then made the crew meet their doom in their attempt to take revenge for the death of your son. Why did you say to him that you would never forgive him until he kills that whale? Why did you accuse him of murdering his son? Jim was wrong to send Sikes to the whale, but you mustn't say that he had killed him. Because of your mad mission, these two children are orphan now. If you hadn't sent Jim to kill that whale, he would have been alive now and would haven't thought of revenging. Jim wanted to kill the whale at all costs to comfort you only. Therefore, he didn't listen to anyone's advice. He was happy only when someone instigates him against that whale. He could not realize that imprudence and taking revenge will never benefit anybody. The death of your son and husband shall teach you important lessons."

Then, Morgan departed the house to condole the families of the sailors who had died while confronting the whale.

Rosa's eyes were full of tears. She sat on a chair and began to weep.

"I wish that I had not instigated Jim to take revenge," she whispered to herself, "I lost, both, Sikes and Jim because of my tongue."

//////////////////////////

A week later, four warships sailed to the north pole in search for Tylo Frip. Morgan joined Bill's crew and sailed with them in many journeys. He became a rich trader like Jim. He reared Jim's orphan children who grew up and joined Bill's ship.

Morgan lived in comfort, but he didn't forget his old friends. He also didn't forget Tylo Frip; The Legendary Whale.

About the Author

Ali Abdelrahman M. Yeddi; the budding novelist and artist, was born in 2007. He is studying in the second year Secondary School. He produced many arts works. This is his first novel in English.